Students, faculty find similar interests, ideas

Companionship dispels the letdown after classes.

The first place we gather — to question, to learn, to grow.

Together we are LT.

We are the segments of a large complex, which is fluctuating yet unbroken. In sharing each high school year, we bring together random talents and temperaments which eventually become a recognizable pattern throughout the school. Each person, with his individual experiences, his separate traits, is fundamental to the LT mosaic, because these distinct qualities provide a source for the school's vitality and growth. Likenesses and common occurrences, on the other hand, serve as a basis for our unity. Our similar and differing natures combine and expand to shape the nature of LT.

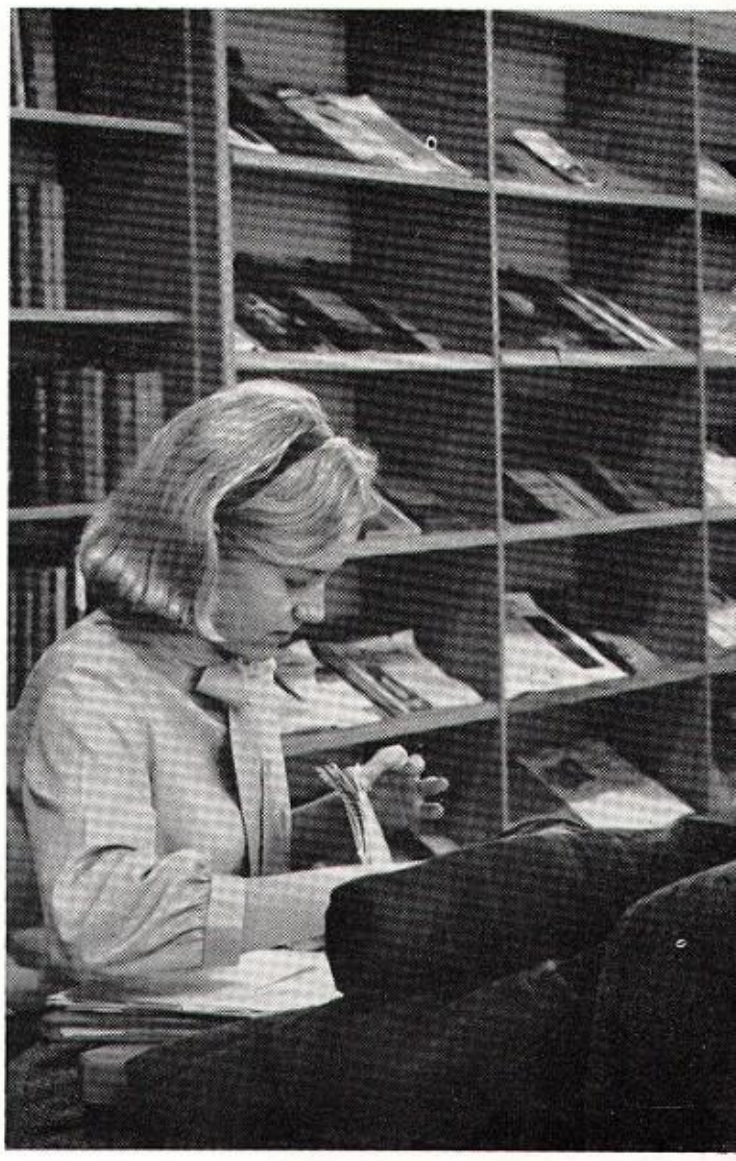
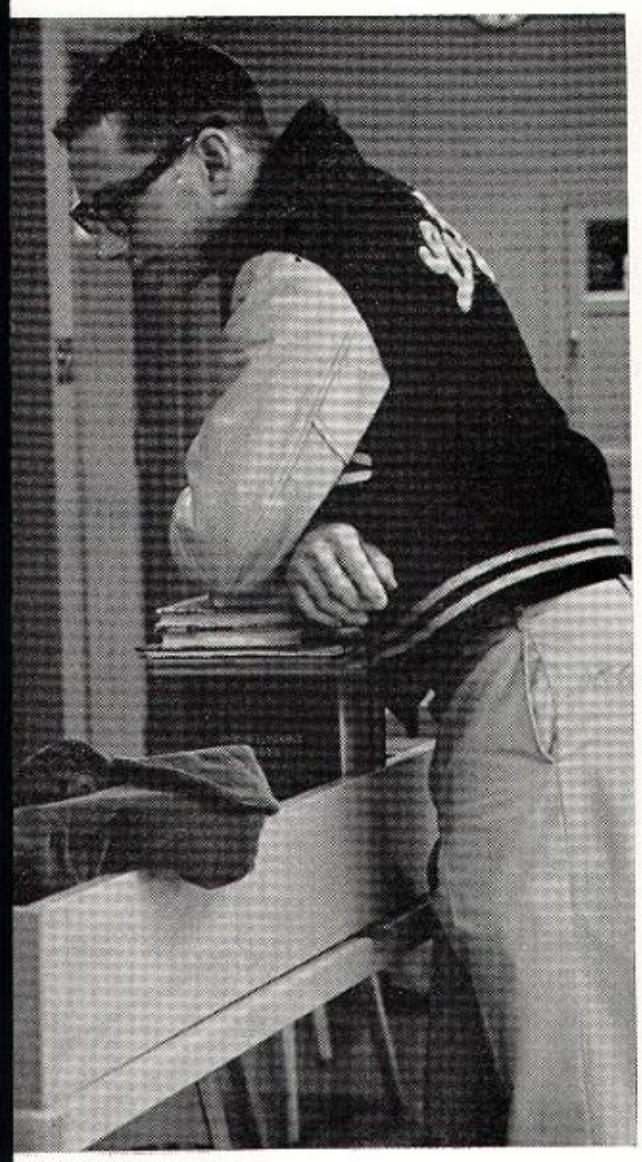
Homework doesn't seem so difficult when done together.



The library takes care of little worries and big projects.



The school is the setting in which we are evaluated. Within its framework, the individual becomes a distinct aspect of the school as a whole. As each person gains identity in the group, he moves to assert his individual differences more and more. His character is further shaped and clarified in situations he encounters, relationships he builds. Yet, the school can influence him only so far; the individual must then review his experiences so that he can learn from them. As the crowd of scattered feelings and impressions within each of us comes into focus, the years spent with others take on greater meaning in the knowledge that together we are LT.

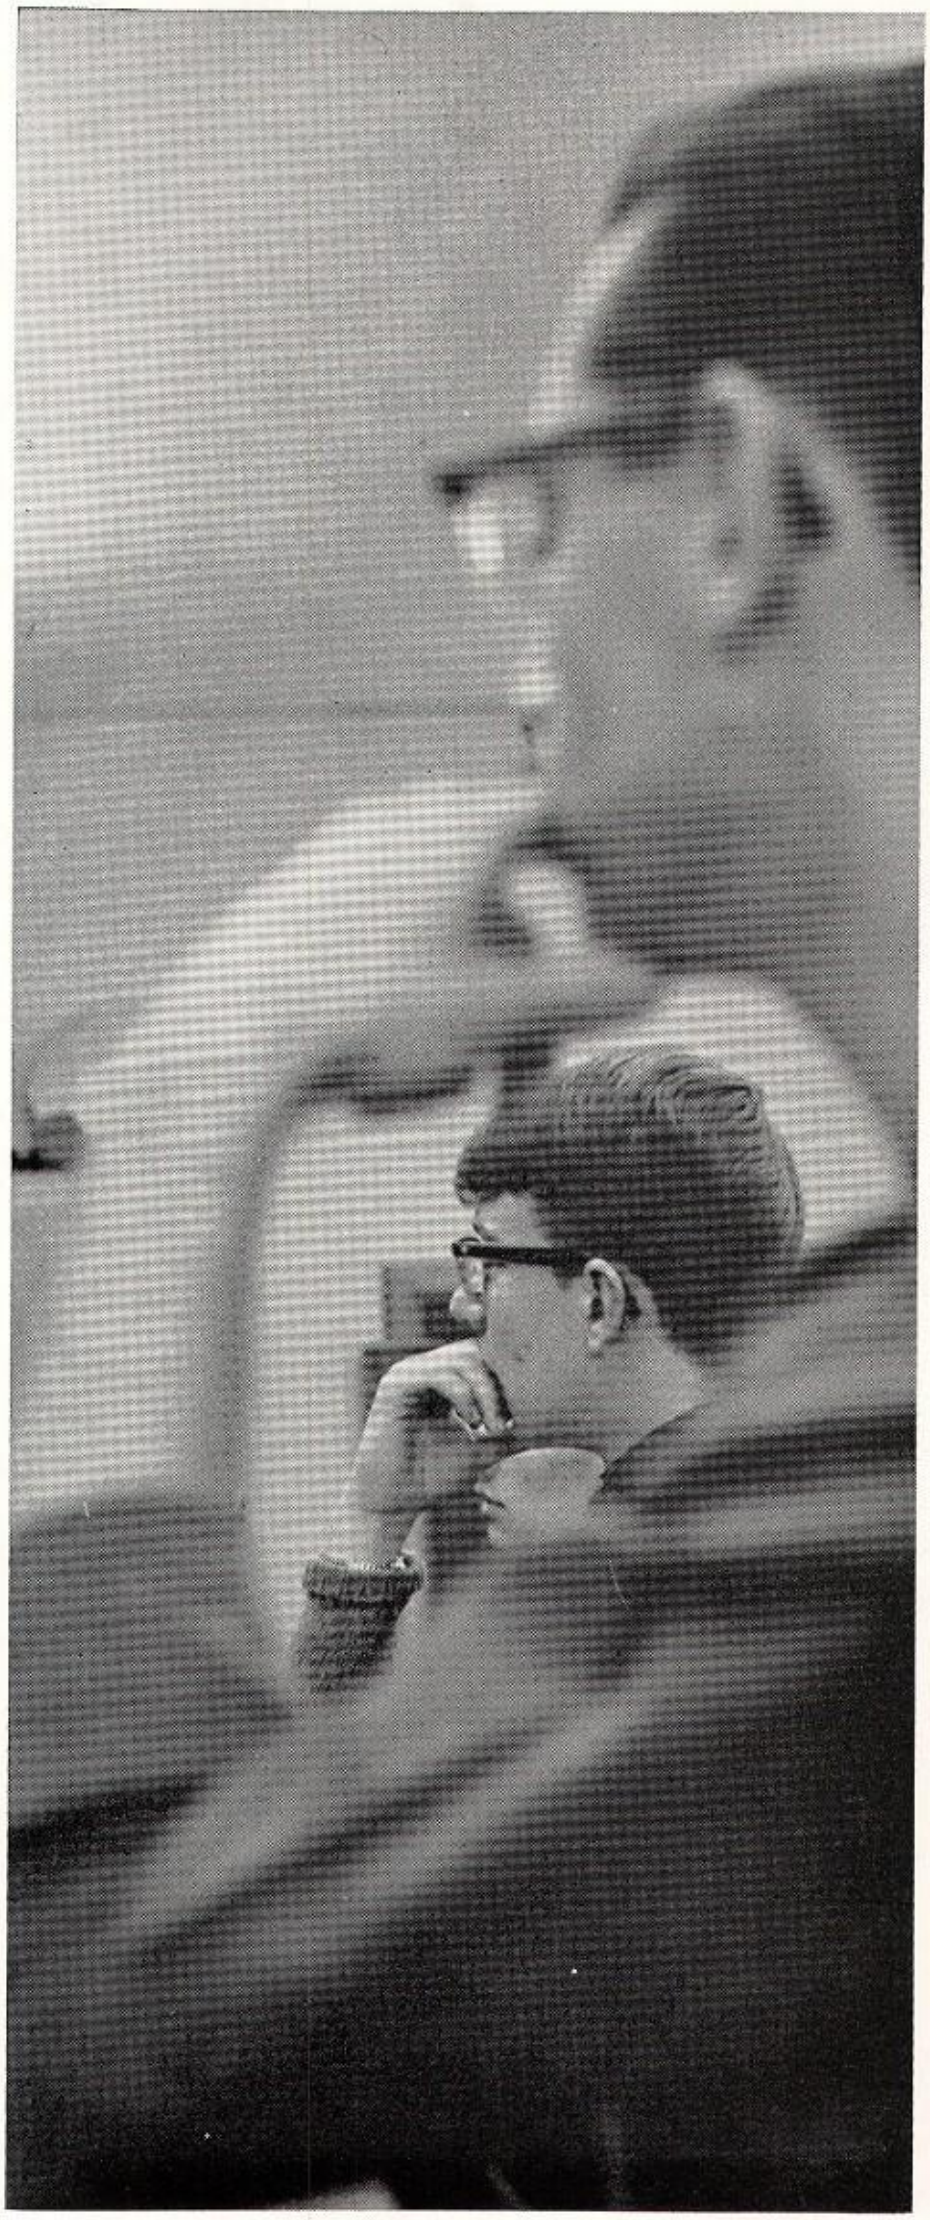
in pattern of academic, extra-curricular life

A winning float requires chicken wire and busy fingers.



Similar poses of concentration reflect similar thoughts.

We are the terms in which LT is defined. We each have experienced a time, a condition, and a quality of LT which have never existed before and which will never exist again. Each of us has experienced these circumstances in a different way, for each looks at the school from his own point of view. These experiences broaden our outlook while intensifying our impressions of the school, of education, and of our lives; they remain a working part of us, to be used repeatedly in handling new and challenging situations. Some incidents are trivial, while others will never be forgotten for their depth. We are made of our experiences, each experience a distinct reminder that together we are LT.

Our primary purpose in coming to LT is to broaden our minds through study. Teachers and students must work together to achieve this common goal. The teacher attempts to create an atmosphere conducive to learning. Stimulated by the challenge which the subject offers, his students strive for a greater understanding of it. Learning is not reserved for students alone; it is a two-way process, benefiting both student and teacher. Each seeks and gains knowledge, sometimes forgetting what he has learned, but always increasing his awareness. Through the exchange of ideas and the development of concepts, we together awaken to the excitement of learning.

Administration sets

The area on which the administration placed its greatest emphasis this year was the co-ordination of all of the departments within the high school. Striving to enhance the meaningfulness of each individual and his importance to the school, the administration and the Board of Education sought to create conditions that would contribute toward making the school an even more operative educational facility. Greatly concerned with the development of each student's research habits, the administration specifically promoted the library as a learning center.

Recent surveys of all departments formed the basis of many changes in the methods and objectives of the LT curriculum. When the recently conducted Health and Safety Survey is published, there will undoubtedly be modification of the buildings. There were several changes within the administrative offices themselves, including a new director of guidance, a new director of business services, and a new north campus dean of boys.

English department emphasizes language skills,

Aldo Mungai
Chairman,
English Department

With an increased emphasis on impromptu and expository writing, the English Department worked to furnish its students with the language skills necessary for college or vocational endeavors. It also attempted to supply its students with a background and appreciation of classical as well as contemporary literature.

For students who desired more than the essential three-year English program, such electives as Speech, Oral Communications, Dramatics, Stagecraft, Journalism, and Creative Writing were offered. Most seniors also had the opportunity to take either English Literature or English IV C. Whenever possible, students' achievements were further encouraged through class discussions, oral reports, diagnostic skill tests, and recordings of famous literary works. In addition, individual conferences were frequently employed to analyze students' progress and efforts.

Special Ed. stresses practical everyday living

A gradual expansion of facilities and services of the Special Education Department has enabled many blind, deaf, or educably mentally handicapped young people from nearby suburbs to learn to be vocationally independent. This department was the first of its kind in the state of Illinois. Formed in 1956, it is supported by the co-operative efforts of fifteen school districts surrounding La Grange.

The students involved in this special education are grouped into small classes according to their ages, abilities, and needs. This year almost 350 pupils were enrolled in forty separate classes. As its role in our public school system becomes increasingly important, the special education department plans to continue the development of its special student placement services.

This year, for the first time, the Language Department permitted freshmen to enroll in language courses formerly offered only to sophomores and upperclassmen. This change allowed more extensive study in a particular language and provided each student with a better background for college. A combination of oral drills, tape recordings, dialogues, and the use of the language lab helped to develop each student's conversational fluency. Grammar lessons emphasized and supplemented grammatical material introduced in oral work. As the pupils acquired skill in a specific language, they became familiar with the culture of the foreign country. This diversified pattern of instruction motivated the language students toward higher achievement.

Department adds team-teaching at South,

Harold Bitting
Chairman,
Social Studies
Department

Striving for a more extensive coverage of the causes and effects of important historical events, the Social Studies Department extended its successful team-teaching program to world history classes at south campus this year. Each combined class, often including as many as sixty-five students, was offered various films and lectures, while individual students prepared research projects.

A further advancement of the department was the institution of an "open door" policy for American history courses, which permitted the enrollment of any junior or senior. The inevitable results were an unusually large enrollment and a consequent lack of instructors. To solve these problems, many south campus teachers were enlisted to aid the overburdened north campus faculty. The department hoped that this year would be a transition to a leveling-off point in future enrollment, since many seniors would already have completed American history in their junior year.

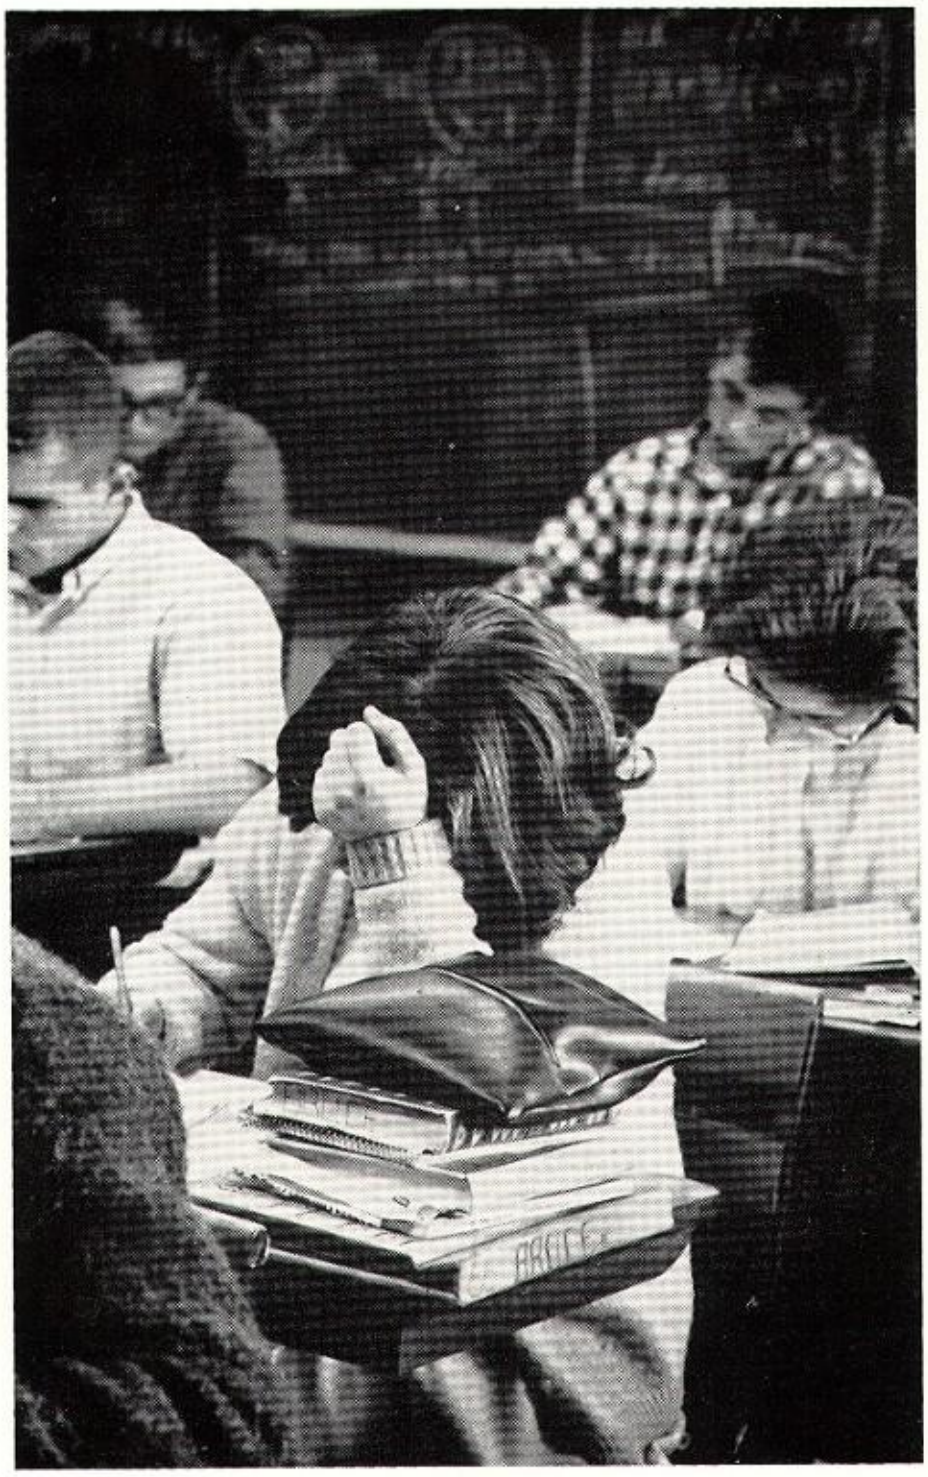
proofs, problem-solving, logical reasoning

In an effort to keep up with the rapidly changing ideas of modern mathematics, LT's Mathematics Department has been using the textbooks of the School Mathematics Study Group, a new, experimental series of books designed for temporary use. This year, freshmen classes were introduced to two trial texts, one of which will probably replace the SMSG books on the freshman level, allowing the math program to become even more advanced.

Realizing the necessity of a deeper understanding of basic algebraic processes in today's scientifically-minded society, the department urged students to employ new methods in their mastery of mathematics. Students were encouraged to study independently and were given an opportunity to discuss difficult theories and principles in class. By presenting more comprehensive and up-to-date material, the department endeavored to maintain student interest in mathematics.



"Hey, we didn't cover this in class!" say the sober faces of these algebra students as they discover that they're on their own in doing tonight's homework.

The Science Department continued to adapt itself to the growing need of its students for a more thorough knowledge of science. The newly instituted biology course, developed by the Biological Sciences Study Committee, emphasized genetics, cellular structure, and the process of evolution. The new text also stressed the more chemical aspects of biology in order to impress upon the student the unity found throughout science.

In all science courses, students were urged to discover scientific principles in the laboratory before studying them in the text. This procedure enabled students to gain a better understanding not only of the phenomena under consideration but also of the scientific method as a research tool.

Departments

Throughout the school year, the Industrial Arts Department made an effort to supply its students with knowledge and skills in metallurgy, electricity, wood-working, and graphic art which would benefit them in later life. This year a course in advanced metals was offered at south campus, while at north campus the photography laboratory opened an entirely new field to those interested.

With numerous courses and continuous displays of works produced by pupils, teachers, and professional artists, the Art Department gave the entire student body a greater opportunity to appreciate art. A new course, Art Seminar, designed to promote creativity and originality in academically superior students, was initially presented as an experimental course in connection with Northern Illinois University and later in the year as a part of the permanent curriculum.

principal objective in Home Ec, Business

The school year produced several changes in the curriculum of the Home Economics Department. Courses were altered to include foreign and creative cooking, child development, and home management. In order to attract more boys to home economics, the department initiated Foods Service, a course primarily concerned with catering. These changes were part of the department's continued effort to present each student with a course to fit his special interests and to increase his individual skills.

The Business Department offered many opportunities for the development of practical business skills. Classes in the basic subjects, typing and shorthand, had a large enrollment, and students could qain familiarity with more advanced business procedures through specialized courses in bookkeeping and business machines.

Bands, choruses, orchestra furnish inspiration

Brian Barber's expression reflects the self-assurance resulting from long hours of band rehearsal.

Diversity was the key to the continued success of the Music Department. The orchestra, with new conductor Mr. Barber, and the south campus choruses, led by recently acquired directors, Miss Lewis and Mrs. Cornelisen, appeared at many seasonal and special events. The North and South Campus Concert Bands, playing at all football and basketball home games, contributed much to LT's athletic success. In addition, the bands performed at their fall and spring concerts, culturally enriching the school. Chief among the Music Department's goals was the instruction of its students in the patience, co-operation, and diligence so necessary to musical excellence. Courses in instrumental and vocal music, supplemented by more interpretive programs in music exploration and literature, were designed to achieve another goal of the department - to build a foundation for further music study.

Exercise and participation were major concerns of the Physical Education Department in providing students with varied athletic activities. Sports stressed not only individual co-ordination but also the ability to function well in groups. Freshman and sophomore girls took part chiefly in team sports, while upperclasses advanced to the specialized skills of apparatus, archery, badminton, fencing, and golf. Concentrating on the development of physical fitness according to the President's Program, boys practiced weightlifting, wrestling, and gymnastics in addition to daily calisthenics. Outside of class, the department utilized its staff to the fullest to give direction for both girls and boys in intramural programs and competitive sports.

The fact that LT's students take their clean halls, carefully prepared lunches, and neatly typed forms for granted is eloquent testimony to the inconspicuous efficiency with which LT's Service Personnel execute their daily work. Yet, quite often the work these people do over-reaches its expected limits. From the early morning hours, when the cooks are preparing breakfast and lunch for the thousands of students and faculty, to the quiet of late evening, when the custodians and secretaries work to re-organize the school for the next day's activities, our Service Personnel strive constantly to maintain LT's pleasant, cheerful atmosphere. The medical staff are always careful to safeguard the health of the students and faculty, and, like all the people involved in this department, are ever willing to extend themselves to the students to brighten their school experience.

The experience of belonging takes on varied significances.
In organizations, we encounter a larger part of the student body and investigate new interests.
As we donate a part of ourselves to our activities, we heighten the meaning of LT's traditions.
In turn, organizations increase our versatility and strengthen our character. Each of us, confronted by often unappreciated responsibilities of membership, learns to give and take,
to co-operate with others.
We discover our own capacities for leadership and creativity.
Our interests deepen. Little by little, we gain a feeling of Student Council, under the direction of President Bill Obalil and chief sponsor, Mr. Edie, initiated many new programs in an attempt to involve all students in the non-academic aspects of the school. Student Council committees exchanged ideas with Representative Assembly in order to obtain more diversified opinions. A cafeteria board was formed so that less faculty supervision would be necessary. Guides, furnished by the Guidance Committee, were posted in the halls throughout the day to aid visitors. In conjunction with other key school organizations, Student Council developed a new, more consistent dress code as well.

Co-ordinating its projects with Girls' Club, Boys' Club again fulfilled its obligations to provide a number of activities and services beneficial to the entire student body. The effective operation of the club depended on the leadership of the executive board and of sponsors Mr. Neuneker, Mr. Nemecek, and Mr. Gianuzzi. Boys' Club joined with Girls' Club to construct their annual Homecoming Float. Members volunteered their services as waiters for the Girls' Club Dad 'n Daughter banquet. Of value to everyone at LT was the updated Student Directory, indispensable as a reference tool. "Jade East," the semi-formal dance patterned after an Oriental theme, was among the first of the events on the spring social calendar. Along with all of the other projects of Boys' Club, the dance exemplified the strong desire of the club to include everyone in its activities.

Service to the school was the guideline for the activities of Letterman's Club, a new organization composed of varsity letter winners. President Jim Vopat and sponsor Mr. Arthur Rawers were responsible for the effective handling of club plans and projects. Members served as ushers for all home basketball games to help manage overflowing crowds. In keeping with their promotion of athletic spirit, members regularly maintained bulletin boards publicizing both coming and completed sports attractions. The lettermen opened a few of their activities to the student body, such as the showing of films of the 1964 professional football championship game between Baltimore and Cleveland. The chartering of the club evidenced the high degree of interest in athletics at LT.

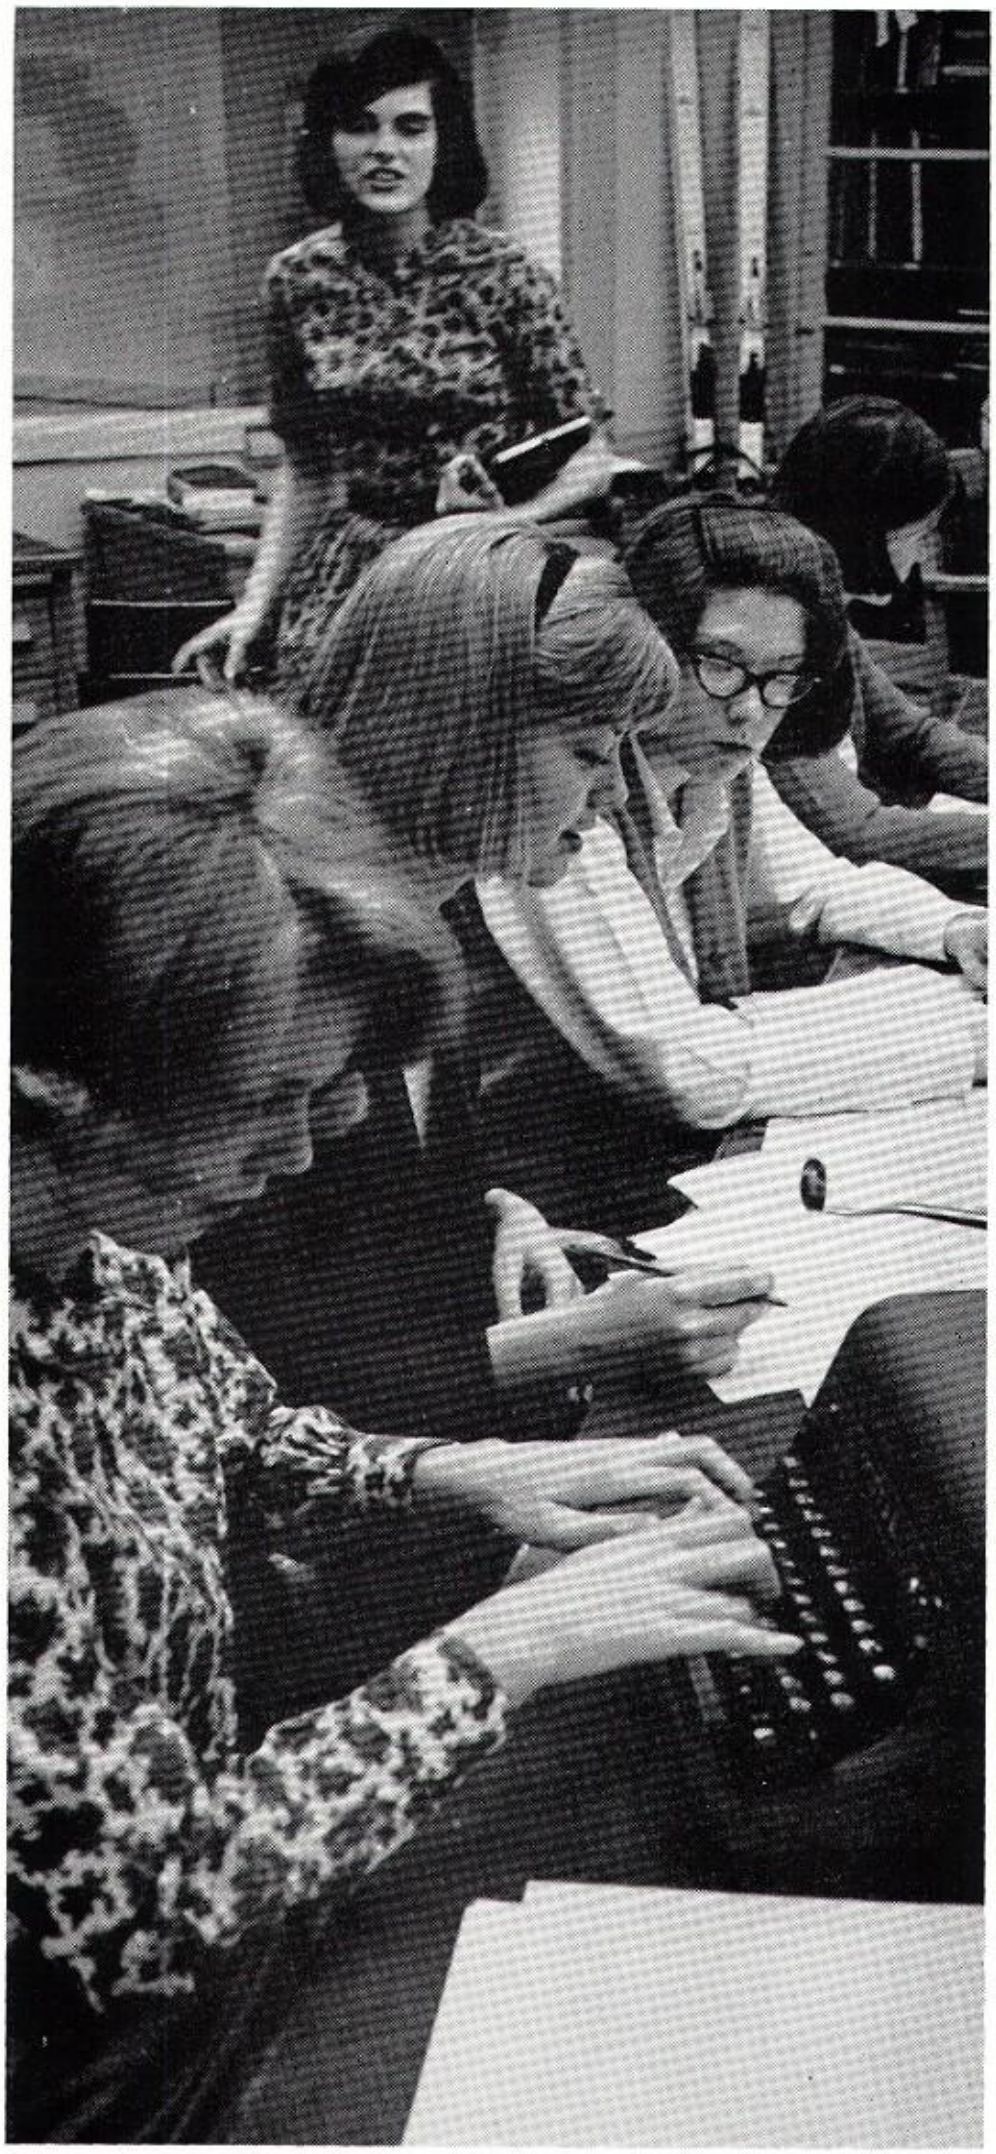
"Tab" staff members offset frequent deadlines



Difficulties are ironed out and tentative write-ups become completed copy as "Hab" staff members work steadily to complete the next section.

Over one thousand senior pictures litttered the tables of the "Tab" room as the senior picture committee alphabetized the portraits of the Class of '65. Meanwhile, other members of the staff were drafting the accompanying write-ups, selecting the candids, and composing the senior class history. The senior section was only one of the several deadlines that the 1965 Tabulae editors and staff worked to meet. As sections were finished, inexperienced staff members gained necessary skill and knowledge under the direction of sponsor Mr. Bull. Occasionally the staff removed the strain of meeting deadlines by indulging themselves in a formal dinner and a Christmas party. Most members had the chance to exchange yearbook publishing ideas with other yearbook staffs at the ISHSPA, NSPA, and NISPA conventions held in Champaign, Chicago, and Dekalb respectively.

Well-dressed "Tab" editors sing their tale of woe as their contribution to the Christmas party's entertainment.

innovations of "Lion"

Having overcome the problems of keeping a bi-weekly newspaper bi-weekly, Lion staff members went on to experiment with changes in the format of their paper. To the readers, the most noticeable alterations in the "Lion" were the reduction in size and addition of two pages. This year, a four-page literary supplement of student creative writing was included with the dependable, widely-read news articles. Such efforts required whole-hearted staff involvement, including support from a large number of South Campus reporters.

Taking time out from usual business-like duties, the "Lion" editors celebrated Christmas in their office with a formal banquet, complete with linen tablecloths and candlelight. To become more skillful at handling their publication, editors and staff members attended several district, state, and national conventions and represented LT in contests for both journalistic and creative writing.

Layout problems must be cleared up by "Lion" editors Marshall Poole, Lucia Torian, and Ginger Gulley in time to meet an approaching deadline.

The 1965 Pen and Inklings asserted itself as a self-contained organization. Without the warm-up of Writers' Club roundtables, prospective staff members at North Campus wrote critiques of student poetry for sponsors Miss Allen and Miss Jordan, while Mr. Blei asked underclass applicants for original compositions. The newly selected North Campus editors decided in December on a less pressured schedule of earlier deadlines and distribution dates. Manuscript requirements, plans for illustrations, and a precise 1-to-5 grading system completed the policy for the upperclass section. Although North and South Campus procedures differed, both staffs collected material, read manuscripts, and formed publicity committees and distribution committees, which issued the pre-ordered copies one week before final exams. "Pen and Inklings" once again belonged to all four classes and thoroughly represented the English Department.

in "Pen and Inklings" and Quill and Scroll

For the seventeenth year at LT, certain members of the senior class involved in publishing the school's two journalistic media were elected to the international honor society, Quill and Scroll. This organization has approximately thirty thousand members in over eight thousand chapters throughout the world. The criteria for selection by Miss Kay Keefe and Mr. James Bull were interest in and contribution to high school journalism displayed in service to either the "Lion" or the "Tabulae." The dual purpose of this special recognition was to reward deserving students for their efforts in journalism and to encourage the furtherance of the journalistic skills which they had begun to develop in high school. Pins and certificates were awarded to the new members at the annual candlelight dinner, held in celebration of their election.

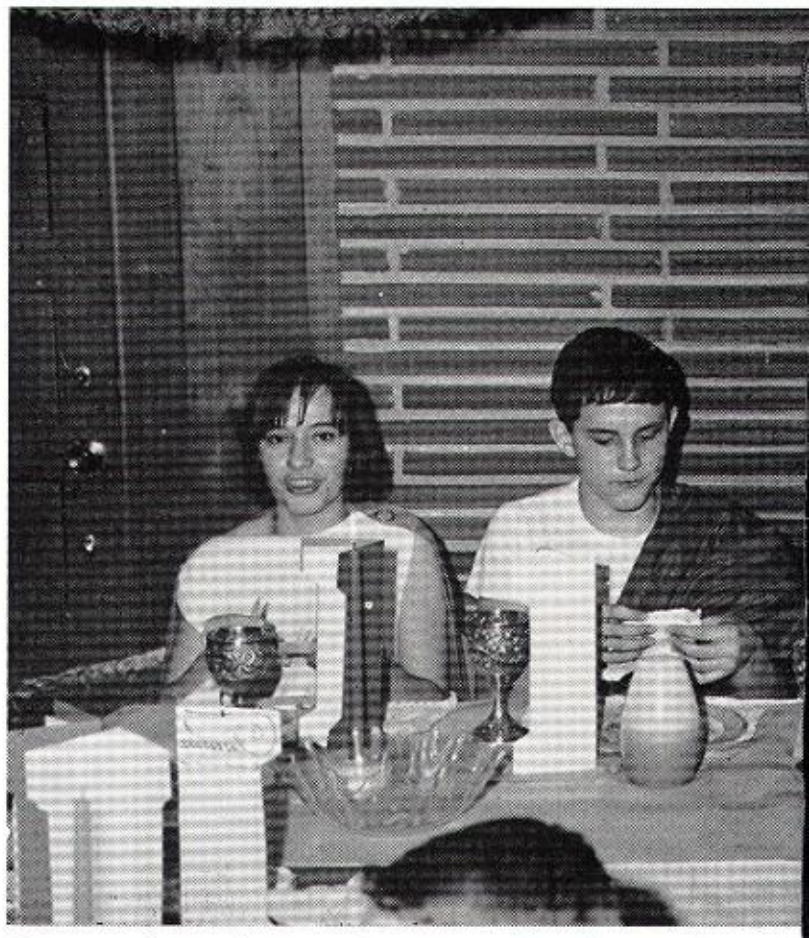
Pattern of ancient Roman life guides planning

To promote a greater understanding of Latin and to encourage an appreciation for our inheritance from Rome were the underlying objectives of Latin II Club. Each student in the large enrollment of the club, guided by Mr. Hammerlund and Miss Wilson, enjoyed staging skits and playing Latin-English word derivation games. Club members practiced their Latin at the Christmas celebration by singing well-known carols in Latin. Color slides and informal narration afforded club participants a chance to become more familiar with Roman and Greek civilizations visually. At one session later in the year, an invitation was extended to freshmen who were anticipating joining the popular Latin II Club. Sophomores in ancient Roman garb re-echoed the phrase "ab ova ad mala" at their final meeting, the traditional Roman banquet.



The atmosphere of ancient Rome prevails as the toga-clad members of the Vergil Club attend the annual banquet which boasted whole roast suckling pig.

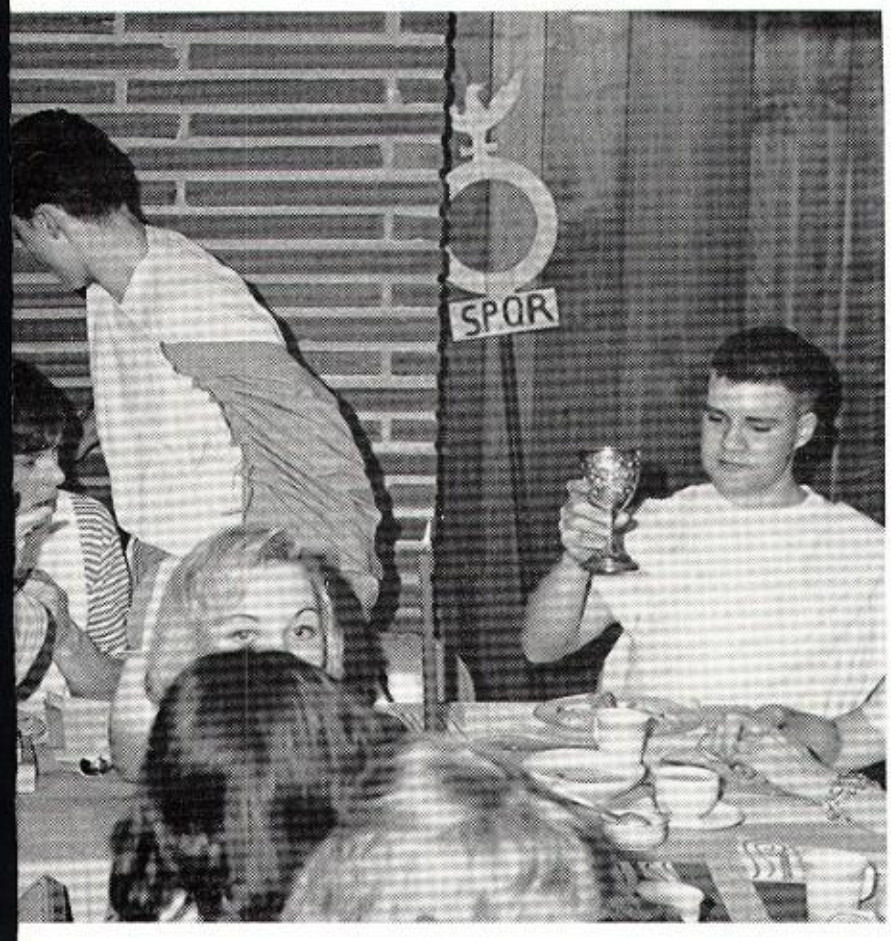
of authentic Latin II, Vergil Club activities



In order to give Latin students an appreciation for the lives of the ancient Romans, Cicero-Virgil Club sponsored frequent activities. At the monthly meetings, members played games for language skill in Latin and were entertained by Rome-inspired skits. Miss Wilson and Miss Birney directed the programs and consulted with the students on the problems of achieving authenticity in club projects. The members tried to infuse as much Roman spirit as possible into the construction of their Homecoming float and into the fudge sale at their Club Carnival booth. However, classical ceremony came naturally at the Roman banquet, which diners attended in homemade togas. The club picnic in May challenged members to show their strength in a program of Olympic events.

Pinatas are the traditional center of attention as Spanish Club members plan for this year's Christmas Party.

The 1965 Spanish Club provided its members with a variety of interesting activities in an attempt to bring them closer to the culture and customs of Spanish-speaking peoples. President Tom Jones supervised the festivities at the annual Christmas Pinata Party, leading members in the singing of Mexican and American Christmas carols in Spanish and in the breaking of the traditional pinatas. Another high spot of the year was the initiation of new members in March. Students with a Spanish grade of 1 or 2 for the first semester in Spanish I were invited to join the club after undergoing an initiation ceremony devised by the officers.

Parisian scenes and personalities from popular French magazines introduce SC French Club officers Julie Hursch, Betsi Houck, and Carey Cibulka to present day France.

Enjoying the conversational application of the French language and learning more about French culture were the principal considerations behind French Club activities. In order to increase the participation of the 130 members and to establish greater rapport between the classroom and the club, sponsors Miss Ford and Miss Lutz and president Sue Kust organized a French Club Council, to which each class elected a representative.

A get-acquainted party featuring French games began the year's activities promptly in September. An American Santa Claus and French games and carols contributed to a Franco-American Christmas party. The club's plans for spring included an evening meeting, with movies and a French speaker for entertainment following a potluck supper. Members anticipated their Club Carnival cafe, complete with authentic sidewalk artists.

German, Russian Club

Puppet show readers and sound effects people line up before rehearsing the entertainment for the next meeting.

German Club officers, sponsors Miss Meyer, Mrs. Unna, and Mr. Hoch, and committee members who were elected to represent every German class co-operated to prepare for each of the club's well-attended meetings. Miss Rathert's supervision kept Wagner's "Die Walkure" one measure short of desecration by a student rewriter and a student cast. The parody was attentively received at the club Christmas party. Afterwards, der Weihnachtsmann entered the Student Lounge to hand out grab-bag gifts. The club members enjoyed watching two German movies at a Chicago theater although they did not understand the unfamiliar vocabulary in the rapid conversations. In April, the choice of Sauerbraten, sirloin steak, goulash, roast pork, and beef roulade with a Strudel dessert tempted many members to a downtown restaurant for a complete German meal. The last of the year's activities, the work and relaxation of a Club Carnival booth, brought the club home again to LT.

Early in the fall, newly-elected officers of Russian Club met with sponsor Mr. Petronaitis to make tentative plans for the year. Out of this meeting developed a series of monthly activities, each intended to interest all club members. In an effort to learn more about Russian culture, the club visited a Russian Orthodox Church and went to see dances and plays of Russian origin. A highlight of the cultural programs was a lecture on Russian philosophy given by Monseignor Denisoff, a professor at St. Procopius College. Members also enjoyed the Christmas potluck and two inter-school mixers held by high schools in the area. In April, a tour of the language facilities at the University of Illinois provided a glimpse of the opportunities in teaching Russian. The spring banquet, featuring a guest speaker and the state Russian contest winner, appropriately closed the busy year with both recognition of scholastic performance and relaxation.

Theatre Board was responsible for four dramatic productions throughout the year. The board members, directed by Miss Mellen, presented "Pygmalion," "Macbeth," and "J.B." in addition to helping with the South Campus production of "Take Her, She's Mine." Duties for each play were divided among several committees within the board itself. Their combined effort assured the continued success and popularity of LT's dramatics program.

LT was represented in the National Thespians Society by seven seniors this year. Sponsor Mr. Thompson selected members last spring and this fall on the basis of the number of points awarded for play performances and work behind the scenes. Although the highly talented Thespians did not perform as a group, they accented their year by writing and producing the spring assembly.

This year, Dramatics Club's goal was to orient its club members with as many aspects of play productions as possible. By presenting plays and skits, both North and South Campus groups received a deeper understanding of the techniques and skills involved in the theater. The most festive event at South Campus was the Christmas potluck and skit presented in the Theater of the Round. President Brian Wilson also led the group in informal analyses and criticism sessions following each of their productions. The upperclassmen in the club presented skits and one act plays. In addition, President Jerry Jensen scheduled movies to be shown after school not only to members but also to any other interested students. The efforts of both groups were rewarded by trips to Chicago, to see plays presented by the National Repertoire Theatre.

Important speaking, listening skills perfected

Rising at 7:00 A.M. on Saturday mornings to compete in frequent suburban tournaments became almost customary for members of LT's Debate team. Tourneys at Augustana College, Navy Pier, and Northwestern University highlighted this year's successful season. Of special importance was LT's fourth annual participation in the television series "Rebuttal" in which LT was represented twice.

Propositions such as international control of nuclear weapons and Medicare brought heated discussions in most engagements. These and other controversial world and national issues called for numerous "evidence" cards and long sessions of practice. To most debaters, though, meeting this challenge was well worth the effort.

One of the main purposes of the Forum is to provide all interested students of LT with a knowledge of current affairs. In order to effect a more alert and informed student body, president Bill Sharpless, with the aid of Mr. John Attig and Mr. Richard Wood, succeeded in attracting many recognized personalities to speak at LT. The Forum introduced such distinguished guests as: Dr. Walter Judd, who spoke about the present world situation; Edward Derwinski, former delegate to the United Nations; Chester Morrow; Congressman Collier; Ray Rybaky; and Mayor Daley. Besides presenting speeches, Forum also conducted a tour of the inner city to view living conditions in Chicago. Concerned members discussed problems that our world faces, since they were aware that they would soon have to face those problems themselves.

hootenannies spark interest in Folk Music Club

The cultivation of greater music appreciation was the principal goal of Mu Tau. Music instructors Miss Lewis and Mrs. Cornelisen sponsored the activities of the club. Among these were the monthly meetings, featuring performances by the members, which provided an opportunity for listening appreciation and an introduction to various styles of musical compositions as well. Another important project of Mu Tau was the organization of the Pops Concert. The members helped to decorate the gym and served food during the concert. Members were also afforded the opportunity to usher at local appearances of professional musicians. Trips to such musical events as "Oliver" were arranged to allow students to see outstanding entertainment. The Club Carnival booth marked the last of Mu Tau's major yearly activities.

Great interest was taken in the Folk Music Club in its second year here at LT. Club members, sponsored by Miss Milesko, showed their enthusiasm by staging an intermural hootenanny during February in the SC Little Theater. Members urged the participation of interested students from four local schools. The event proved to be so successful that club members were encouraged to plan another such project. Having agreed upon a date in late spring, members voted to hold it outdoors. Enthusiasts participated in bi-weekly workshops, which replaced more conventional club meetings. In addition to providing valuable experience on a variety of musical instruments, including the guitar, banjo, and harmonica, these gatherings were excellent opportunities for members to become acquainted. The club also held several informal hootenannies and sing-alongs throughout the year.

Members of Future Teachers of America profited from club activities which introduced them to the profession of teaching and also to other people with similar interests. Sponsors Miss Corley and Mrs. Huegli and club members held a fund-raising Christmas party, observed Teaching Career Month in April, and presented a play on child discipline. The group learned about educational systems in foreign countries at a panel meeting with students from abroad. In keeping with past years, representatives attended the State Future Teachers of America Convention at Decatur, Illinois. There they met with students from all over the state to discuss the purposes of the organization. The club's final activity was a dinner held in honor of the departing seniors.

FNA members to preview prospective vocations

A great many girls interested in nursing careers took advantage this year of the insight into the profession which Future Nurses of America offered. Providing a professional view of the nursing field, sponsors Mrs. Skarda at NC and Mrs. Scheeler at SC led and advised the officers and club members. Attempting to broaden the scope of their study, the club invited various guest speakers to address the group, and also arranged many field trips to local hospitals. The combined membership of the North and South Campus branches, numbering over 100 girls, co-operated in the club's drive for funds by selling confetti at the Homecoming game. The money made in this campaign was used to finance the Mildred Fetzner Scholarship Fund.

Members of the North Campus Home Economics Club enjoyed numerous activities, including the annual Christmas party and the Simplicity Pattern style show, which presented several aspects of homemaking. Guided by sponsor Miss Virginia Davis, the girls were given the opportunity to hear guest speakers discuss their interior decoration gift suggestions, and holiday cookie recipes.

The South Campus group, directed by Mrs. Cerveny, also scheduled a fashion show. The Christmas mother-daughter tea was the highlight of the holiday season. A style show of their own creations climaxed the year's activities for the South Campus members.

In directing the Business Club, sponsors Miss Ripley, Mr. Eckerle, and Mr. Latimer presented and explained several aspects of the business world that students had not had time to cover in class. Wide-ranged club activities kept the members well-informed about the latest trends in the field. Guest speakers from business concerns in the area discussed opportunities and benefits in business careers. A favorite project was studying the stock market fluctuations and the reasons behind them. Students familiarized themselves with the intricacies of the market when they pretended to buy stock and then recorded the daily closing prices from newspapers. The final event of Business Club's year was a more social enterprise, the construction of a booth for Club Carnival.

Pictures relayed back to earth by the Ranger 7 moon shot are carefully analyzed by Bi-Phy-Chem members.

Until this year, Bi-Phy-Chem, LT's science forum, had been split into the North Campus branch sponsored by Mr. Arthur Hanson and the South Campus branch sponsored by Mrs. Ruth Wenner. This year, the two groups worked more closely together. Highlighting the year's joint activities were lectures by guest speakers, to which all LT students were invited, and field trips. Lecture topics, such as measuring the universe, water pollution, and nuclear reactors, sparked much student interest. A field trip to the Northwestern University Astronomy Department and a fossil hunting expedition added a great deal to the club's program.

Between special events, members who were especially interested in the topics under consideration led regular weekly scientific discussions. Among the diversified subject matter which Bi-Phy-Chem covered in the sessions were biological warfare, extraterrestrial life-supported systems, and the pictures taken by the Ranger 7 spacecraft.

stimulating lectures, animated discussions

Future Physicians of America, a new organization at LT, was founded this year by President Paul Owles. Mr. Roy Marks, the club's sponsor, helped a great deal in initiating its activities and programs. After the organizational meeting, the members planned lectures by local physicians and deans of medical schools. The group visited local hospitals and saw several movies concerning medicine as a career.

The main goal of the club was to give both boys and girls interested in becoming doctors an opportunity to meet others with similar interests and to investigate the field of medicine.

The aim of Sci-Fi-Sem was to correlate scientific theories with popular fiction stories. A library of science fiction books and articles, contributed by members, was a means for club participants to research topics for analysis. To promote interest in science fiction, club members, counseled by sponsor Mr. Clevenger, voted to present the film, "War of the Worlds," to the student body. Membership in the club included not only those interested in science but also individuals planning to become authors. The club was an opportune way to extend imagination through participation in group discussions and debates concerning various scientists' and authors' viewpoints.

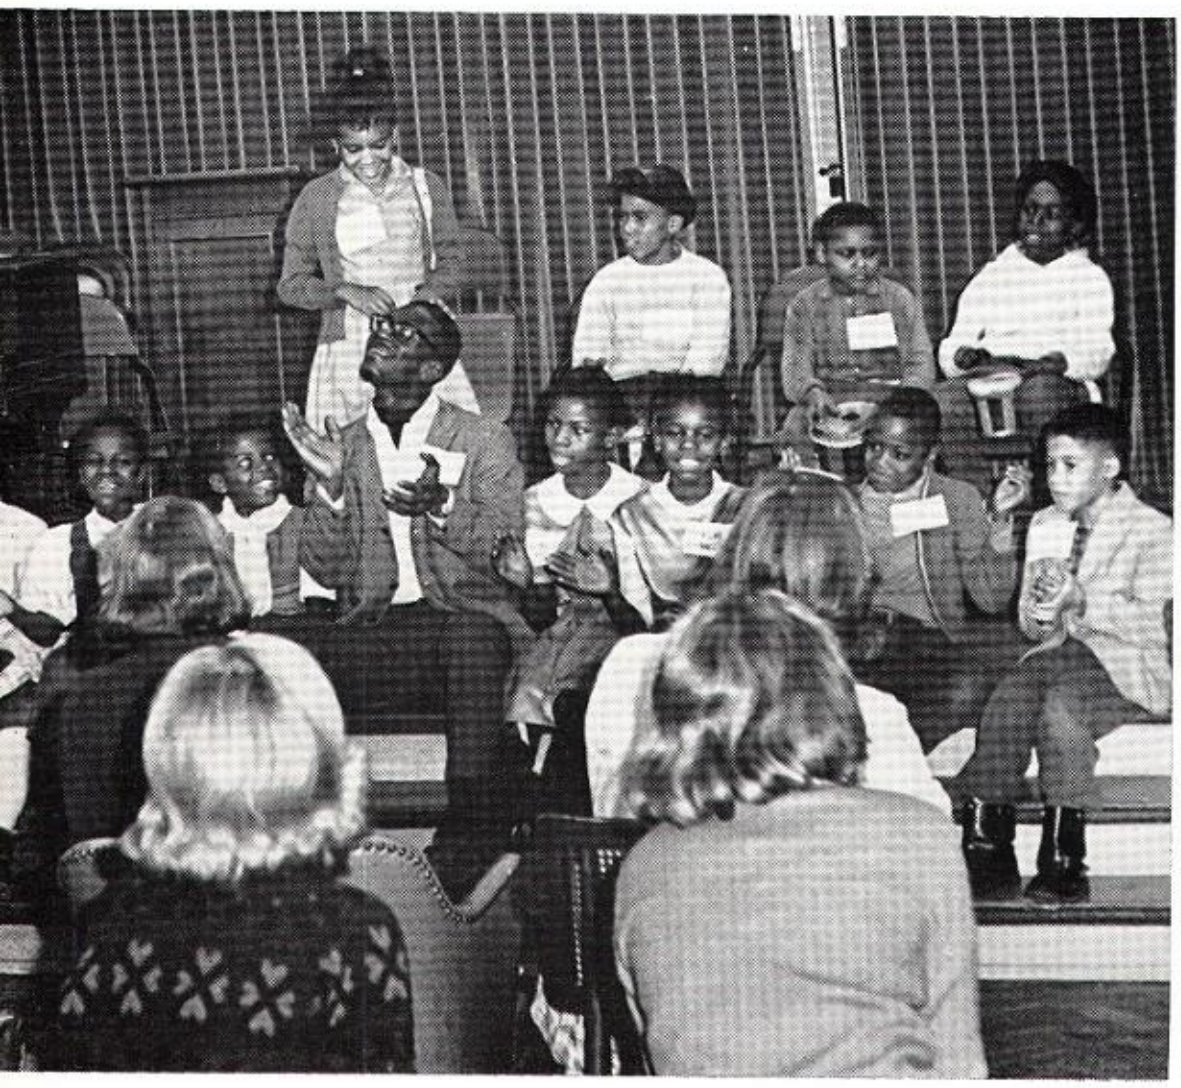
Human Relations, Adv. European History Clubs

Spontaneous hand clapping and foot stamping accompanies the Sulliven House "Stepsingers" at an LT-hosted Human Relations convention.



The increased national concern over social conditions was paralleled by the formation of the LT Human Relations Council, sponsored by Mr. Edward Brogly and Mr. Kent Talor. The chief project of the council was to rebuild and transform Sullivan House, on the south side of Chicago, into an effective settlement house. During Christmas vacation, club members visited another settlement house, Beacon House, where they met and talked with teen-agers from that neighborhood. Members of Human Relations Council took part in the annual Interagroup Relations Conference at Senn High School and welcomed students from Nazareth and Thornton to "Pride or Prejudice," LT's race relations conference. The chance to meet people with different backgrounds and ideas challenged the viewpoints and broadened the outlooks of each Human Relations Council member.

study social issues

A group of sixteen students, led by Mr. Schwass, initiated a new concept in academically-oriented clubs this year, with the formation of the Advanced European History Club. Motivated by a desire to explore the intricacies of European history and current events more thoroughly than it was possible to do in class time, these students decided to organize a seminar-type program, meeting periodically outside class for informal, in-depth discussions based upon the individual research of one or more of the members. These meetings provided the club membership with an opportunity to become acquainted with one another on a social as well as intellectual basis, while increasing their knowledge about European history.

In the costume of fifteenth century Europe, Advanced European History Club members Ken Herlin and Tom Coffin practice their dueling techniques.

Ski, Bridge Club

Preparing to make an opening bid, John Ellsworth counts his points under the observant eye of John Olsen.

Under the direction of sponsor Mrs. Fields, Bridge Club members had the opportunity to learn some of the detailed rules that are necessary for a complete understanding of the game. Those students already familiar with bridge were given many opportunities to improve their techniques. In addition to its annual bridge tournament, the club began planning an interscholastic tourney for future years. President John Ellsworth led the biweekly meetings which alternated between North and South Campuses to accommodate all members. After a successful year of learning, studying, and practicing the complexities of bridge, the club members had developed a working vocabulary of such terminology as "grand slam" and "blackwood convention." This lingo might overwhelm the uninitiated, but Bridge Club members used it advantageously at their frequent meetings.

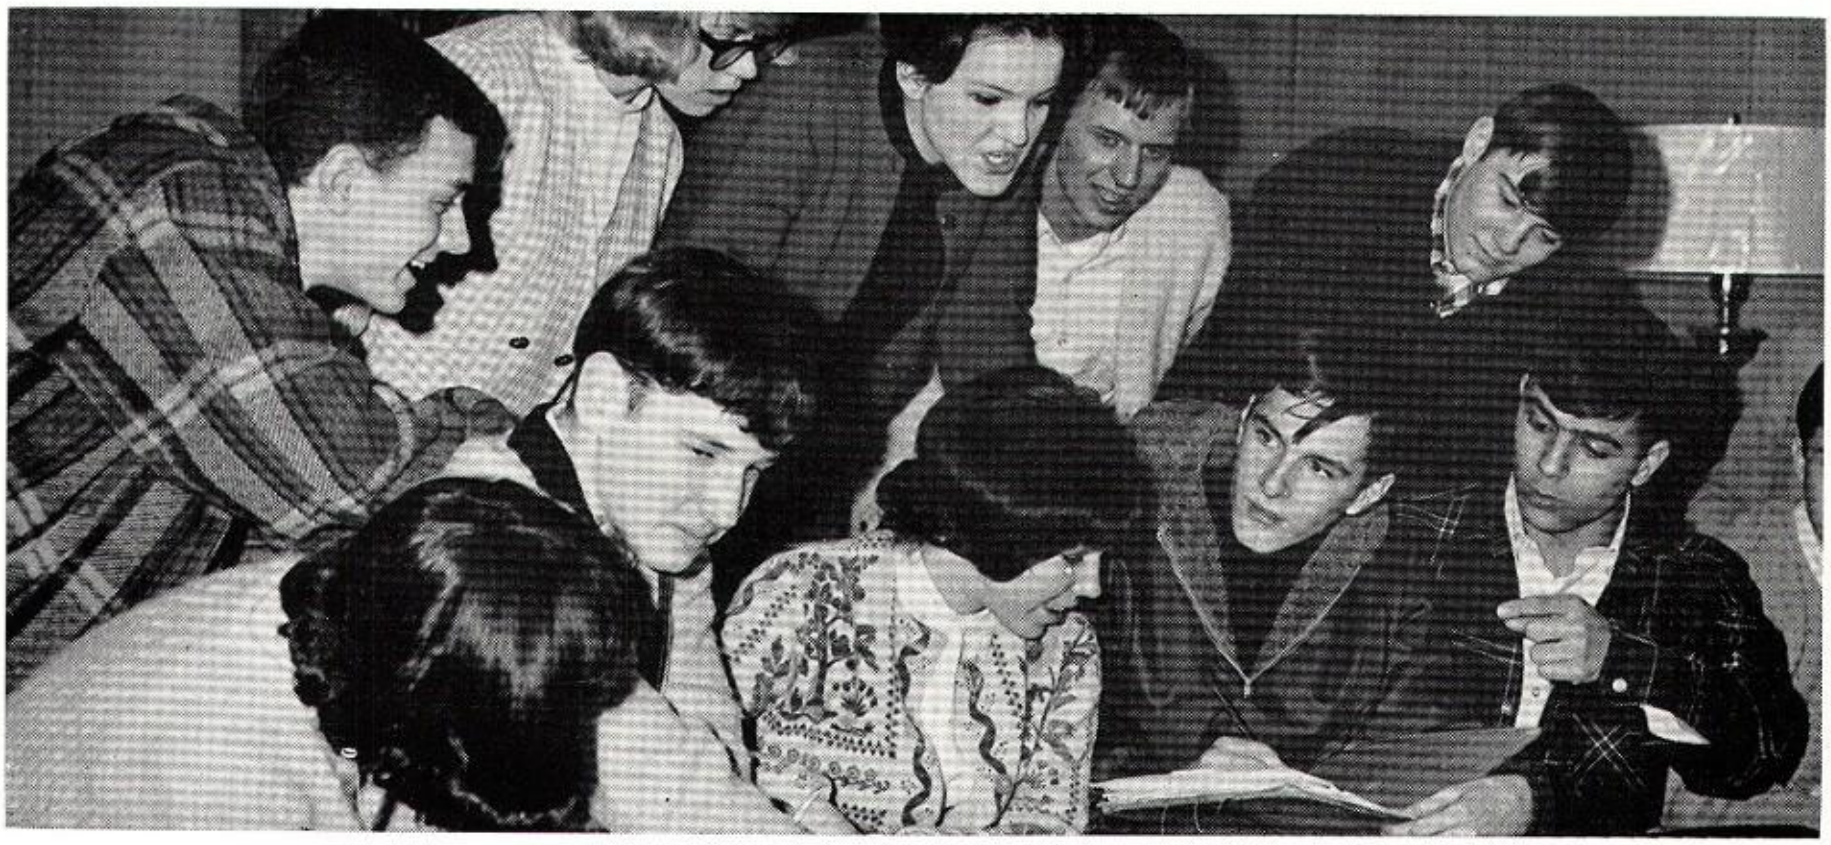
challenge members' physical, mental dexterity



"What's the best idea?" becomes the foremost question in ski club members' minds as they deliberate about their Club Carnival booth.

The current popularity of skiing swelled the enrollment of LT's Ski Club to 250 this year. Acquainting its expanded membership with the background and fundamentals of skiing was the goal of this club under the leadership of President Jerry Stefl. Ski Club, which was chartered by Student Council in 1962, distributed this year, for the first time, special "Ski Club" parka patches to all dues-paying members.

Movies and discussions were important features of the scheduled meetings. Next year the club's sponsor, Mr. Shouba, hopes that the weather, and club finances will permit more "on the slopes" activity for the ski enthusiasts.

In anticipation of an upcoming ski weekend, Ski member Keith Tlapa explains the workings of ski bindings to an interested Karen Traficante.

Supervised by Mr. Gary Carpenter, Weightlifting Club was originally formed to provide all interested students with an opportunity to practice working out with weights, since no traditional course is designed to do this. The fact that so many boys were interested in participating in this club, in spite of their having to buy their own equipment, led the administration to institute a free after-school program under Mr. Jackson's direction to replace the club, in order to facilitate students' taking part.

The group's officers worked closely with members to set up individual exercise programs. For athletes interested in certain sports, the muscles vital to that actvity were extensively developed, while those members not on any athletic team received an opportunity to stay in good physical condition.

bodies, increase marksmen's safety consciousness

Rifle Club officers worked closely with sponsors Mr. Baker, Mr. Cermak, Mr. Clevenger, and Mr. Puckett to provide members with a sound and extensive program of marksmanship and safety education. Under the direction of president Peter Aex and the direct supervision of chief range officer Dave Pugh, the club met three nights a week to accommodate the members in its various programs. New members met two nights a week for nine weeks to complete the necessary training course, while more experienced students enjoyed one practice night each week.

Those members who were most proficient with the club's .22 caliber rifles from various shooting positions were given awards by the National Rifle Association and also from the club for outstanding performance in the monthly matches. The high spot of the year for Rifle Club members was the annual Turkey Shoot, an event in which Thanksgiving turkeys were awarded to the sharpest shooters.

Using knowledge gained from regular class work, a member of Industrial Arts Club measures a mini-bike part with a precision micrometer.

For its second year, the Industrial Arts Club provided the facilities for students interested in doing extra-curricular projects connected with the industrial arts. Though the club, sponsored by Mr. Jaacks, had no officers, it succeeded in giving all its members practical experience in the machine, welding and woodworking shops. At the meetings held twice each week, the club members worked on such projects as mini-bikes and go-carts and made tools for automobiles and home workshops.

Because of the additional time made available to them, many students did work that was more advanced than that done in class, while members whose schedules did not permit industrial arts courses learned much about industrial skills.

of ardent handcraftsmen, hobby enthusiasts

Throughout the past year, members of LT's model railroad club, LTHO, along with their sponsor, Mr. Hursh, strove to spread interest, skill, and enjoyment in model railroading. This year marked the end of the planning phase and the beginning of the actual construction of the layout. This construction took place in the South Campus basement and was the principal activity at the bi-weekly meetings. A layout design committee was formed and several meetings were called for special construction work.

In order to gain a greater knowledge of their hobby, members visited the Burlington Rail Yards, discussed their home layouts, and heard several lectures on model railroading. Several contests and the entry of a booth in the Club Carnival added a spark of competition to the year.

This year's Bowling Club again provided LT's bowling enthusiasts with the opportunity to compete in regularly scheduled league games. The twelve teams from each campus were organized under the guidance of sponsors Mr. Hamilton, Mr. Hammer, and Mr. King. The South Campus bowlers met every Monday afternoon, followed by the North Campus group each Tuesday afternoon. Awards given at the end of the year were based on compiled team standings. Special features throughout the year, such as the Turkey Roll at Thanksgiving time, added to the members' enjoyment of bowling as a sport.

of genial competition

Saddle 'n' Spur offered its members the chance to learn about the many aspects of horsemanship. Under the guidance of Mr. Harlan Conley, the only non-faculty club advisor, members enjoyed attending horse shows, where they were able to observe behind-the-scenes preparations. Prominent local horsemen gave informative lectures on the care and handling of horses. A picnic after a trail ride, organized by the officers and the board members, climaxed the year's activities.

Following the re-organization of the club two years ago, membership has increased more than six times. Although statistics show that the horse population is declining, the number of horse enthusiasts at LT remains at a record high.

This year the Stamp and Coin Club was divided into North and South Campus groups. Under the supervision of Mr. Ross Holt at North and Mr. John Davis at South, members discussed possible trips to dealers and the trends in rare stamps and coins. Auctions facilitated the completion of collections and provided an outlet for duplicates. All of the year's activities culminated in the Club Carnival booth, which gave members an added opportunity to acquire coins priced above face value.

Developing "lines of play" and personal techniques engrossed the twenty-five members of Chess Club from both North and South Campus this year. Led by President Dave Molnar, the members met for two hours every Friday afternoon to engage in challenging, but friendly, competitive play and lively discussions of playing problems.

Chess Club members also participated in intrascholastic tournaments and remained undefeated. Under the sponsorship of Mr. Ralph Martin, the club hopes to maintain its high standards of play and to improve in the future.

A demonstration of good broadcasting techniques at one of Radio Club's weekly meetings helps the newer "hams" prepare for their license examinations.

In an attempt to promote ham radio activity on the high school level, members of Radio Club met once a week on Tuesdays to study the International Morse Code, radio theory, and broadcasting techniques in general. Under the guidance of club sponsor, Mr. Orville Warning, members carried on the major activities of maintaining and operating their own radio station, W9MTJ. One of the principal aims of the club was to help each member to qualify for his Federal Communication Commission operator's license. This purpose was realized chiefly by offering the members an opportunity to develop their skills in sending and receiving messages from all over the country.

increases proficiency of Camera, Radio Clubs

A motion picture, complete with living color and scintillating sound, was the principal focus of attention for Camera Club members this year. This novel undertaking, entitled "From Siberia with Cold Feet", was a satire modeled after the current James Bond thrillers and was presented as Camera Club's contribution to Club Carnival. Under the supervision of Mr. David Brown, members learned the basic procedures of motion picture production by experience, as they operated cameras, positioned lights, and directed the student cast. In addition to making this film, the members of Camera Club planned and carried out their traditional photo contest. The schedule for final activities included a lecture delivered by a local professional photographer on careers in photography.

Desire to serve, curiosity about medical field

This year an increased effort by members of Junior Red Cross Council made the organization even more active than ever before. Sponsors Miss Ripley and Mrs. Nechoda helped members in their many projects, which included: planning parties for old people's homes, stuffing Christmas stockings for orphanages, entertaining at a hospital, baking cookies for hospitals, and preparing a photograph album of LT to be sent to other countries. Besides these community projects, members engaged in building a Homecoming float which took a first in the gold division. Council representatives attended a summer training session in August and participated in the monthly meetings of the Midwest Chapter of the High School Red Cross.

The contribution of talents and free time of over one hundred Aides helps the administraton, service personnel, and faculty in keeping the school operative for students' benefit. Deans' and Councilors' aides delivered messages and assisted with clerical work, while library and nurses' aides handled desk duties and kept records.

The door guards, another important group in the Aides program, facilitated the operation of the cafeterias during lunch hours by checking permits and enforcing lunchroom rules. Teachers found that underclass art-room assistants and student audio-visual experts boosted the efficiency of teaching technics. All the Aides were treated to a special spring dinner, held by the school in recognition of their wide contributions to LT.

for athletic activity

Constantly striving to improve girls' athletic skills and leadership qualities, GAA sponsors Mrs. Glick and Miss Hubbard scheduled fifteen activities four afternoons a week, including archery, badminton, tennis, field hockey, and softball. An additional activity, skiing, was initiated this year. Members received points proportionate to the number of hours they played a sport and, at the end of the year, the most promising had a chance to win one of five awards.

President Barb Blume started the season with a speech at the fall picnic. Dad and Daughter Night, the GAA dance, Eighth Grade Play Day, and a variety show at Plymouth Place heightened the girls' enthusiasm during the year. Two girls were sent to the GAA workshop and the GAA camp at Lake Geneva to represent one of LT's largest clubs.

Selected on the basis of a good LT citizenship record and potential leadership ability, the Senior Leaders regularly officiated for after school GAA sports as well as assisted in girls' physical education classes. In both areas the leader was expected to care for equipment, assist in warm-up exersices, participate in the group, and set an example of proper appearance and conduct.

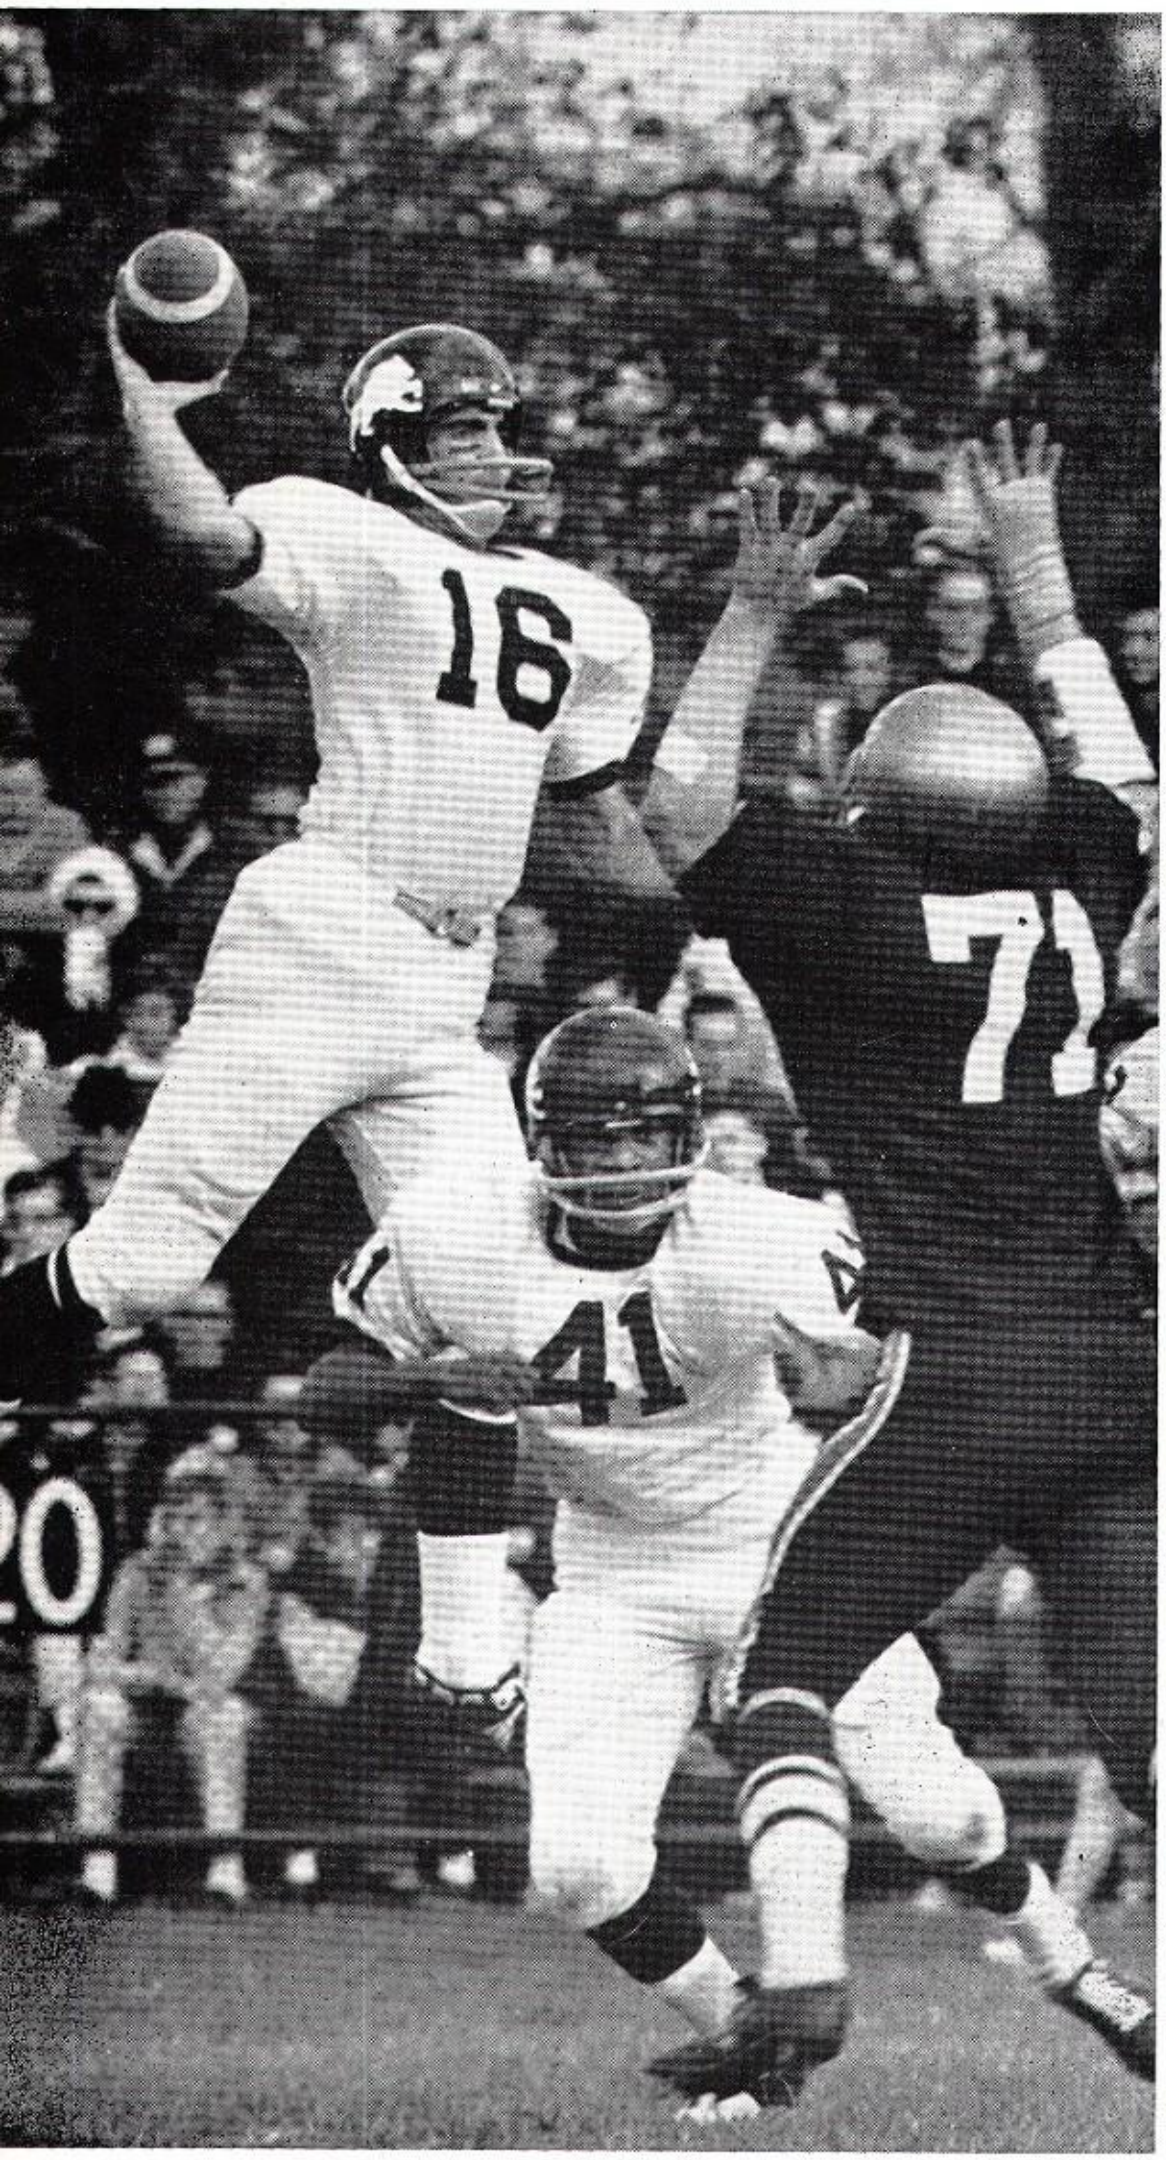
In a few isolated hours, a handful of us takes on the name of LT and the identity of the entire student body. The actions of each athlete affect our team's performance and eventually our school's prestige. To be equal to such responsibility, we co-operate to perfect our game and to promote enthusiasm.

The rest of us join in to support the players. Our eyes follow the action; we react in unison. And beneath this entertainment we feel a trust in the team. We adopt their concentrated enthusiasm and expand it into an all-inclusive spirit; we learn sportsmanship . . . and we come to understand that the school's reputation rests on all of us, that together we are LT.

Varsity football team makes superior showing,



Strong backfield blocking enables John Wintermute to deliver an accurate jump pass despite a tough defensive rush.

Under the direction of its new coach, Mr. J. O. Jackson, the '65 Varsity Football team continued LT's reign as West Suburban Conference champs despite the loss of personnel at key positions. Graduation and moves claimed their usual share of players destined for varsity action. at the beginning of the season, injuries necessitated some shifts in position, but players handled new assignments with skill and apparent confidence. Individual achievements were recognized by post-season awards as LT placed players on the all-conference, all-suburban, and all-state honorary teams.

The juniors who were so effective in the varsity line will be back to bolster the varsity team in 1966. Players from the successful junior-varsity team will combine forces with these veterans to give LT a good chance at a third consecutive title.

A wall of Red Devils forms before Bob Wintermute as he leads the interference in a play against Hinsdale.

The final victory of the year over R-B highlighted a banner year for the Frosh-Soph Football team. In Coach Bob Burson's first year as their head coach, the Cubs rolled over all seven WSC opponents to gain an undefeated record as well as the conference championship. Excellence in blocking and defense, as well as tremendous desire were the main factors contributing to the squad's success. Many players had moments of stardom, but it was the effect of the entire team acting as an efficient unit that carried the junior Lions to victory.

Coach Burson is confident that next year's team taken from this year's strong freshman squads will uphold the winning tradition this year's has begun.

The small squad put forth a great effort in almost upsetting a powerful Downers contingent, but they were two points short in the end. At the district meet the Lion harriers fared better, finishing fifth with the help of several strong sophomores. Coach Armer looks to improve his team in hopes of a stronger showing in 1966.

in conference action, finish first in WSC

Experience played a key role in the success of the '65 Varsity Basketball team. Coach Sandusky utilized lineups formed from a roster boasting six seasoned returning lettermen and a number of talented juniors. The Lions posted an overall record of nineteen wins and four losses. Their 13 - 1 showing in conference play easily captured the WSC title. The single defeat came in double overtime in the final conference game against R-B.

The strategy employed throughout the season was essentially to set a fast pace and keep it. Superior outside shooting combined with an effective fast break kept opponents running, this hampering a tight defense. This aggressive play carried the Lions all the way to the regional finals of the state tournament where they were defeated by sixth-ranked Proviso East.

The juniors who supplied the majority of the height this year will return next year with a full season of varsity experience. With the addition of sophomores from this year's second place Frosh-Soph team, Coach Sandusky hopes to repeat in 1966 as the dominating power in the West Suburban Conference.

Cub basketball team

Using an attack similar to their varsity counterparts, the '65 Frosh-Soph Basketball team exhibited the prowess which has come to be expected from LT's athletic teams. Coach Roger Johnson guided the underclass cagers to a second place finish, amassing a conference record of eleven wins and three losses. In the course of the season, fans were treated to a thrilling display of the fast break, used to great advantage in winning a number of close games. Outside shooting was also especially sharp in order to compensate for a slight lack of height.

Coach Johnson has high expectations for the '66 frosh-soph basketball squad, based on the performance of the upcoming freshmen who will play next year.

attles to second place; swimmers' training pays

A novel practice routine consisting of weight training and short sprints in place of standard endurance work helped Coach Peryon's Varsity Swimming Team post a fine 10-4 record in dual meets. Despite the lack of a school pool, team spirit remained high throughout a season. Swimming success should continue for LT in the near future, as many returning juniors and upcoming sophomores should combine to form a strong nucleus for next year's squad.

Several team records fell as Coach Kenneth Lumb's Frosh-Soph Swimming Team splashed to an outstanding 12-2 season, the finest ever recorded by a Frosh-Soph swimming team at LT. Hard work at daily practice sessions before school at the Y and a weight training sessions after school was the primary reason for the squad's success. Next year should be one of continued good fortunes for the Frosh-Soph tankmen, as many talented freshmen will be returning to form an experienced basis for the new team.

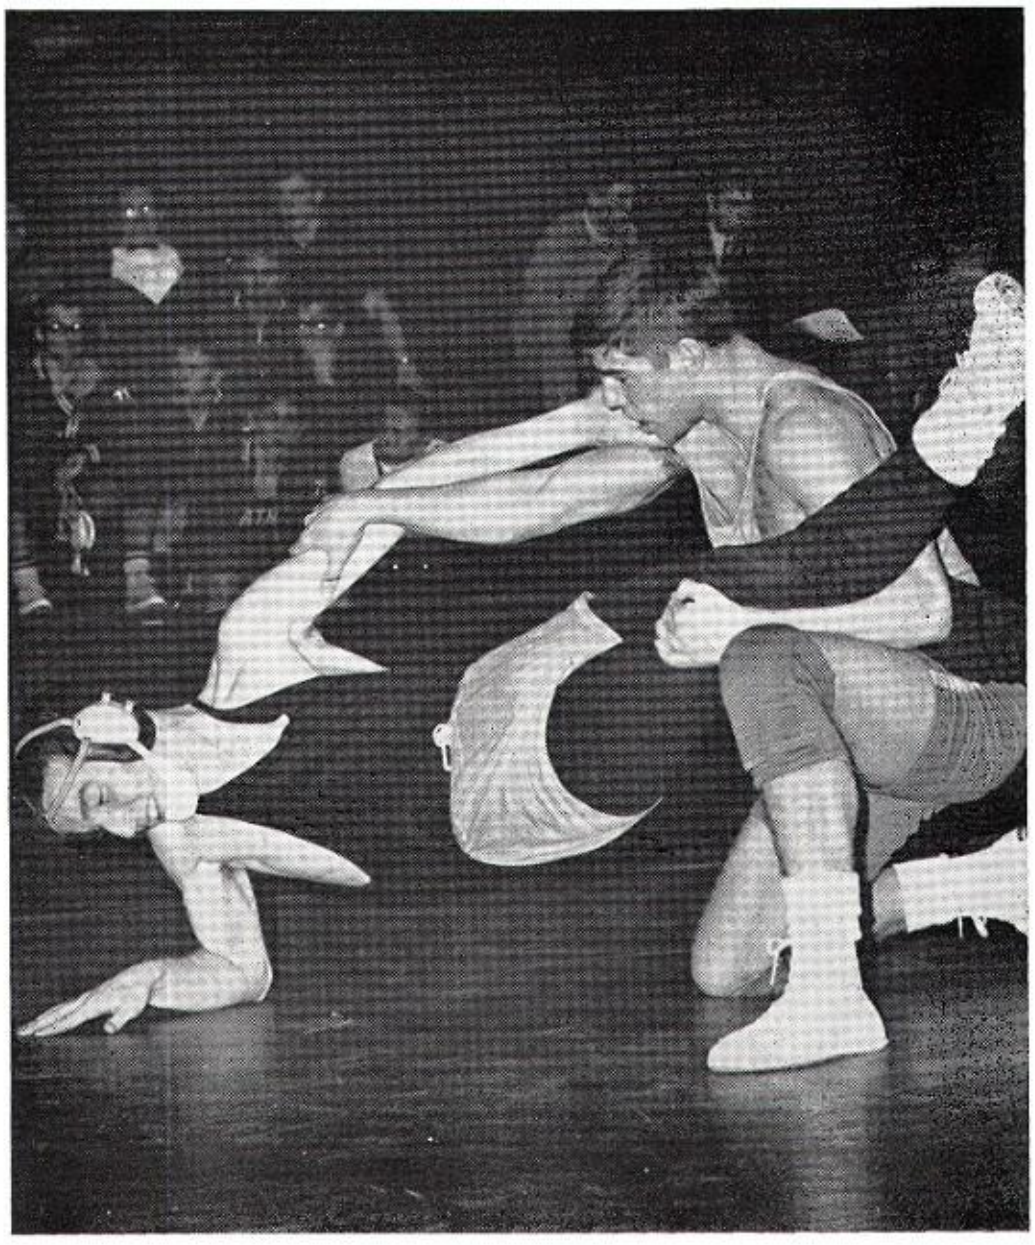
An Arlington man slams into the mat as Rob Baum gains control for LT.



A number of returning lettermen was not enough to win the WSC championship for the '65 Varsity Wrestling team. Starting strong, they won their first four conference meets by consistently wide margins. The grapplers then faced the better teams and were defeated in their final three meets, giving them a conference record of four wins and three losses and an 11 - 6 record overall. This standing qualified them for their place in the West Suburban Conference.

Coach Kraus will attempt to strengthen the team in the heavier weight classes for next season. The championshiy frosh-soph team, along with the juniors who wrestled for the varsity this year, should provide the framework for a strong and hopefully a championship varsity team in 1966.

Consistent winning performances from the middle weight classes coupled with the all-out effort of the rest of the squad carried the '65 Frosh-Soph Wrestling team to a conference crown. A 24 - 19 defeat at the hands of Arlington Heights was all that prevented the team from completing the season undefeated as they finished with a 6 - 1 conference record. They also won all of their non-conference meets to bring the final slate to eleven wins and one loss. The freshmen who will wrestle for Coach Suchomel in 1966 will be trying to duplicate this feat and take a second consecutive conference crown for LT.

The Varsity Track team did not fully measure up to expectations, finishing sixth in the conference meet at Downers. Although the team was very strong in the sprints and hurdles, weakness in the field events prevented the squad from improving its record. Noteworthy areas of strength evidenced throughout the entire year were the hurdles, the dashes, and the relays. Fine performances in these events gave Coach Armer much satisfaction and provided many exciting moments during the season.

The '64 Frosh-Soph Track team had an exciting and generally successful season, despite the fact that the team did not exhibit its full potential in its fourth place finish in the conference meet.

Although this year's team was not especially strong in the field events, impressive showing in the sprints and relays provided most of the points in the squad's meets. Coach Jon Knowles hopes to duplicate these performances with this year's squad.

play varied courses

A well-balanced '64 Varsity Golf team finished the season in a dead heat for second place in the West Suburban Conference. The squad, with Mr. Kraus in his first year as coach, registered a record of four wins and three defeats in conference play. The conference meet at Arlington Heights, which determined the final standings, saw the varsity golfers finish fifth among determined competitors.

Living up to the predictions of Coach Carpenter, the '64 Frosh-Soph Golf team turned in another fine season. The underclassmen captured second place in the conference, compiling an impressive record of five wins and two losses. The two defeats which halted the team's efforts to finish first came at the hands of two strong squads from York and Maine East, who edged the Cubs by scores of 365-370 and 350-352, respectively.

Since the 1965 spring sports schedules had only begun as we reached our final deadline we chose to review LT's 1964 spring sports results and give the reader a look at this year's prospects. By doing this, we hope to present as complete a picture as possible.

Good pitching was somewhat hampered by an erratic offensive attack as Coach Leiber's Varsity Baseball team offset a strong start by finishing in the midst of a losing streak. The team dropped its final five games to finish in seventh place in the conference with a record of five victories and nine defeats. The pitching staff worked hard throughout the season, but the lack of consistent hitting prevented them from finishing higher in the standings.

Hopes for a first place finish were dashed when the '64 Frosh-Soph Baseball team lost its final two games to fourth place Arlington Heights. However, the squad still ended the season with a fine 8-6 record which tied them for second place with Downers Grove in the tough WCS. Members of the '64 freshman team, plus those freshmen who played for the Frosh-Soph last season, should provide a strong nucleus for Coach Burson's 1965 team.

baseball, tennis teams

Amidst tough competition from all West Suburban schools, the Varsity Tennis team finished the '64 season in a respectable fourth place position. They emerged victorious in three out of seven conference clashes. Highlighting the campaign was the perfect 5-0 score turned in by the Lion netmen against the Downers Grove team. Coach Art Rawers hopes to find qualities of good sportsmanship coupled with an equally proficient athletic ability in the '65 tennis team.

A rather sluggish start by the '64 Frosh-Soph Tennis team was compensated for in the second half of the season. After losing two early meets to Arlington Heights and Hinsdale, the team surged back to win their last four metes. It was this recovery which enabled them to finish in third place in conference action with a record of five wins and two losses. Coach Nemecek expects to have another fine team for the 1965 tennis season.

athletes to victories

Urging LT's football and basketball teams on to victory in the West Suburban Conference, varsity Cheerleaders again supplied the pep and spirit that has helped LT win the conference title in the past. In addition to fulfilling their cheering duties at games, they still managed to find time to sell gameside programs and Homecoming buttons. With the money raised from these activities, the group had their uniforms cleaned and ordered a Homecoming corsage for each girl. The squad held cheerleading clinics with neighboring schools to exchange and perfect yells, and planned several potlucks to promote good relations between schools. The frosh-soph squad, this year under the direction of Mrs. Kress, showed their ability to generate spirit as they cheered LT on to the President's Cup.

Enthusiasm runs rampant in the snake dance to the Corral as cheerleaders flank the car bearing the newly elected Homecoming queen and court.

Pom-Pon Squad, under the sponsorship of Miss Bradley, enlivened 1965 basketball and football games with its fast-stepping, rhythmic routines. In order to keep in time with Mr. Hilgendorf at the games, the group rehearsed to tape recordings of LT band numbers. The after-school practice sessions of two hours, three times a week, made it possible for co-captains Meg Niederhofer and Jan Stout to perfect the squad's rountines. Besides appearing at LT sports events, the girls also performed in the yearly State Street Christmas Parade. By means of their diligence and originality, the Pom-Pon Squad once again reached their goal of sparking the enthusiasm of the crowd and maintaining the school spirit of LT's students.

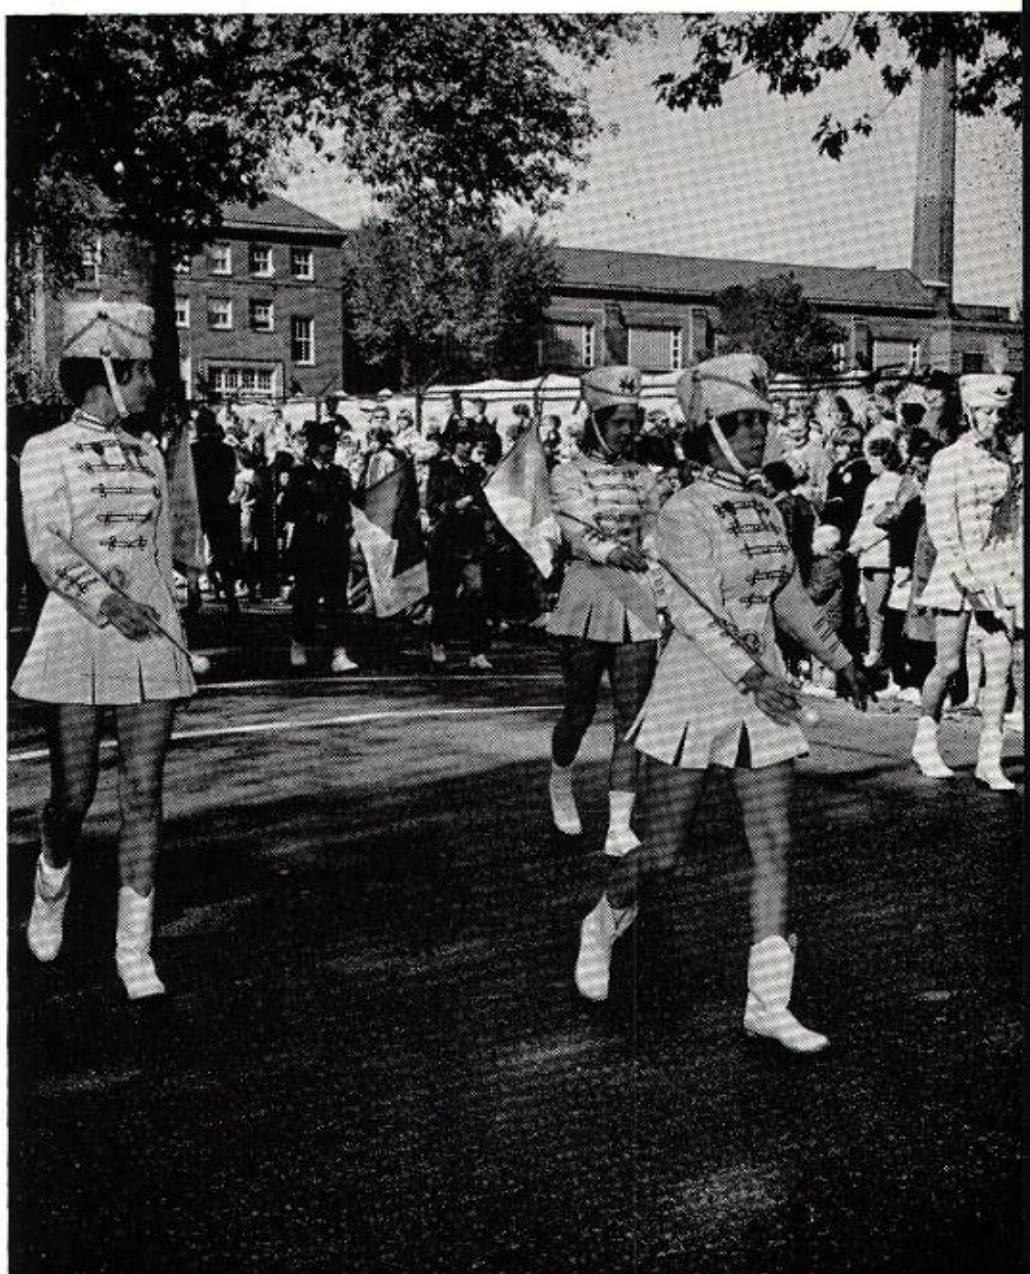
parades, assemblies

High spirits and the success of the teams at sports events were prompted by the appearance of LT's Twirlers. Sponsored by Mr. Harold Hilgendorf, the six members on the squad increased both their skill and the number of routines as a result of long hours of diligent practice. Homecoming, various band concerts, the Memorial Day and Pet Parades, and a performance during half-time at Northwestern University's Band Day gave the Twirlers an opportunity to display their new routines to the student body and to the general public. The reward for all of their strenuous rehearsals came at the State Music Contest where they won first place for the fourth year in a row. The Twirlers generated an atmosphere of enthusiasm for school events. Their successful year brought honor not only to themselves but also to LT.



The spirited cadence of the LT Band sets the pace for Twirlers, strutting through their parade routine.

In those special moments when we come together to watch, to laugh, to cheer, we each rediscover LT. Bathed in a stream of colored lights or blurred by a burst of confetti, familiar places are transformed; well-known faces seem strange, buried in stage make-up or distorted with concentration. As we uncover fresh aspects of our school, we each detect unexpected qualities in ourselves. Joining with others in the excitement of the moment, each of us reacts in his own way to every event. But we soon forget our separate interests in the heightened awareness that we contribute to these special times, that together we are LT.

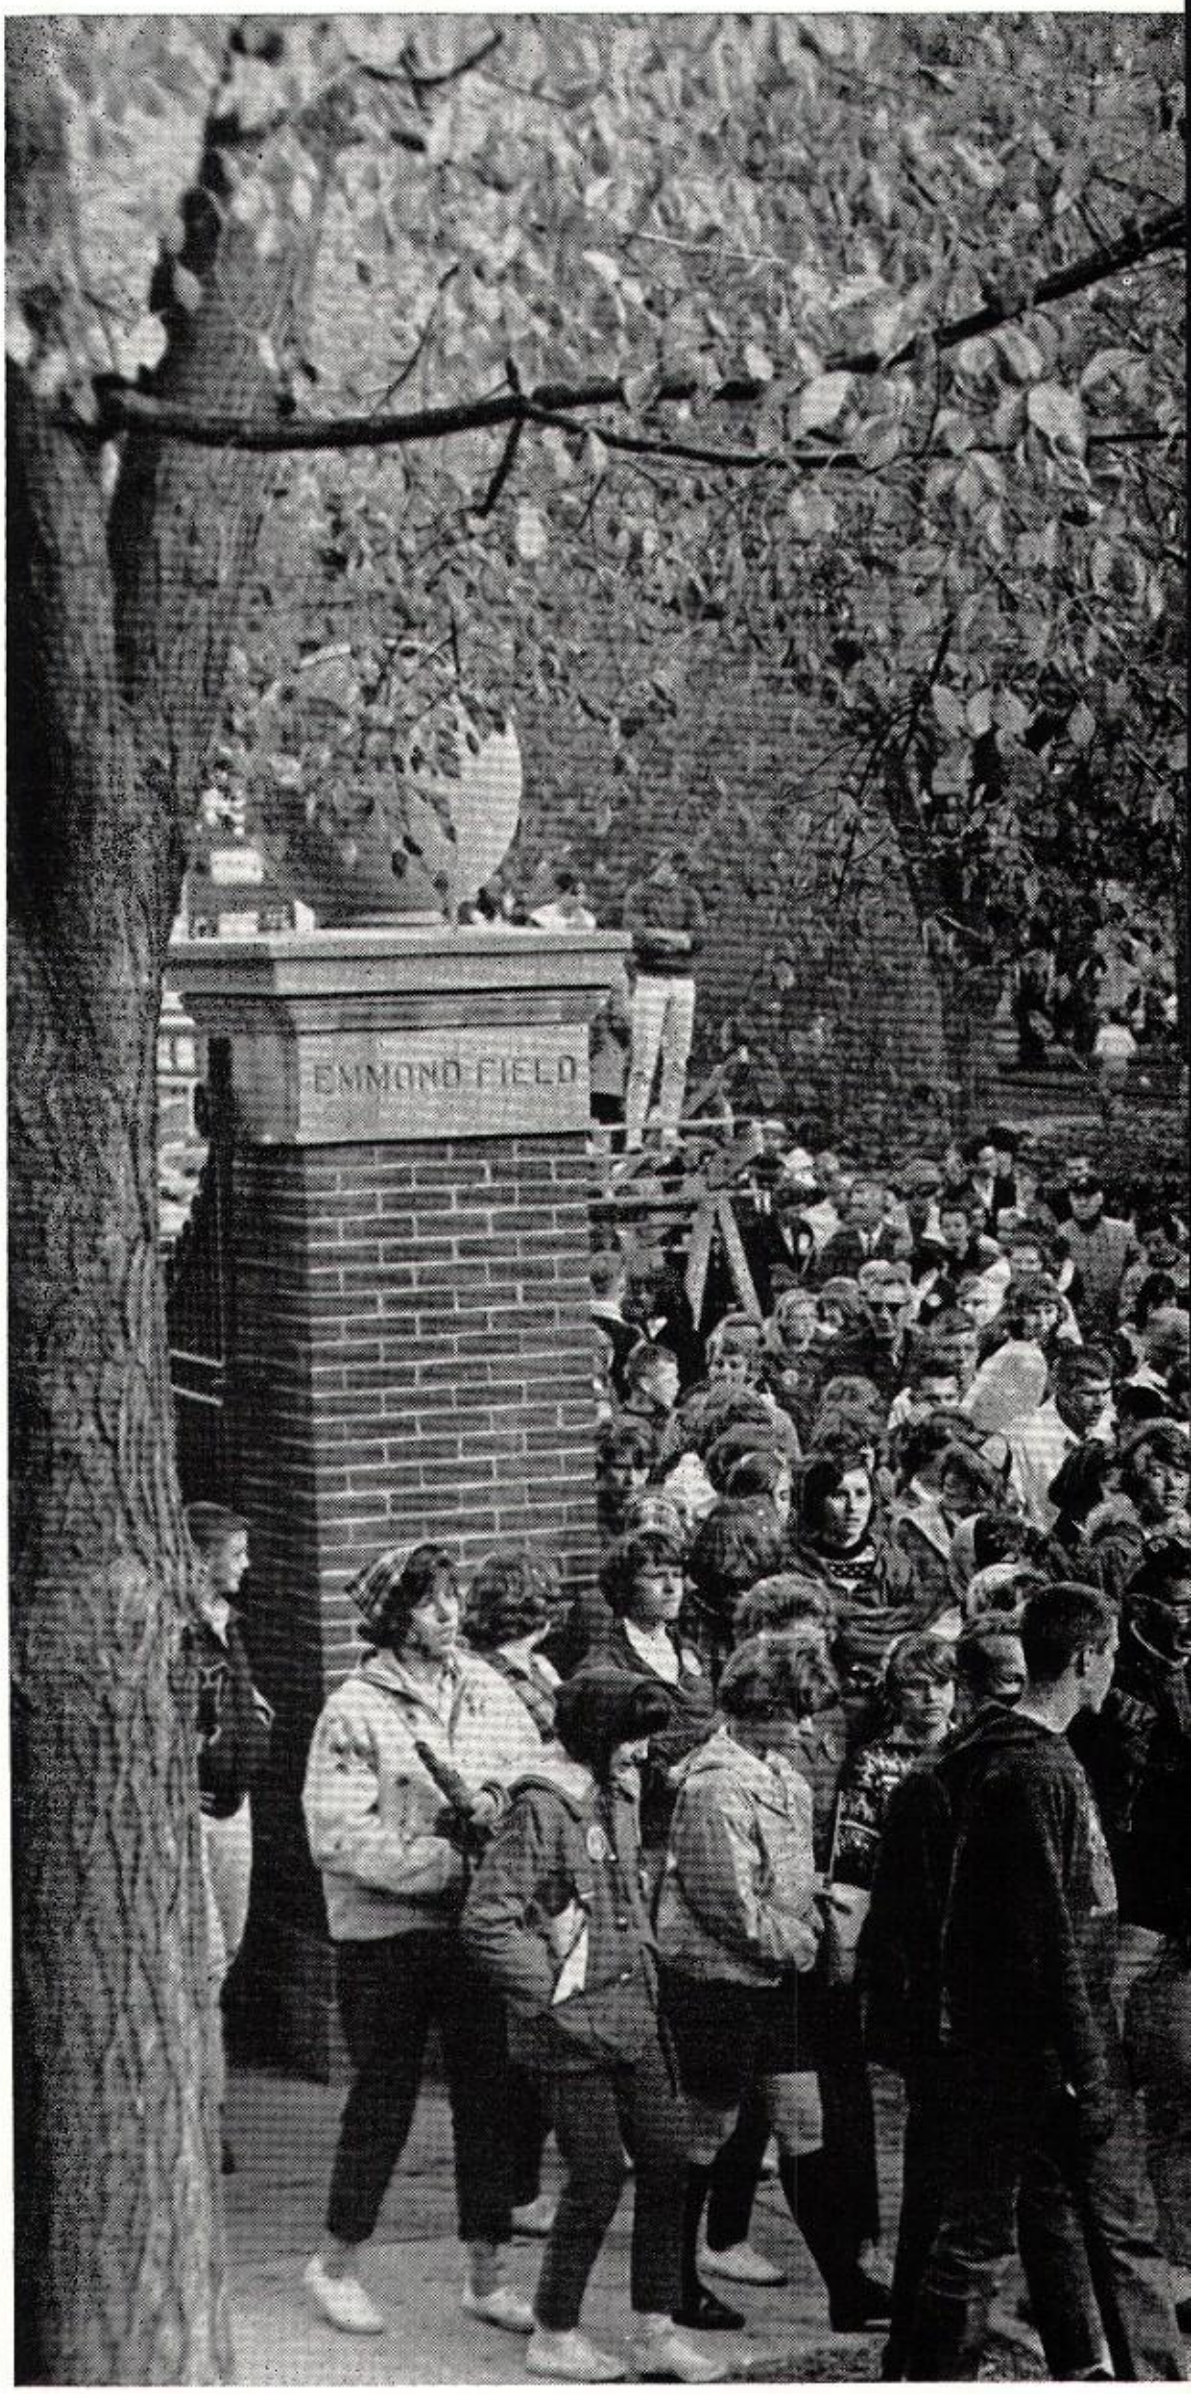
Weeks of planning, final flurries of activity

Times have changed but the vintage of transportation hasn't for the alumni who are riding an old-fashioned fire engine in the Homecoming parade.

Hope crystallizes into reality for Rita Howland as she is named 1964-65 Homecoming Queen.

mark Homecoming

Braving the unseasonably cold weather, alumni of 1940 and LT students turned out in large numbers for the 1964 Homecoming. The preparations for the event, "Our Political Heritage," actually began six months before the weekend of October 9 and 10 arrived. As Homecoming activities drew near, the inherent excitement and the numbers of hours spent on floats steadily increased. The spirit demonstrated at the Friday night pep assembly, "The Last Hurrah," provided the impetus for a successful weekend. Suspense lifted in the final moments of the assembly as Rita Howland was announced queen and Chris Stokes, Pam Fischer, Barb Hagey, and Jeanne Ruzicka court members. Afterwards, everyone thronged to the Corral in the traditional snake dance. Mittened crowds lined the streets for the Saturday morning parade, then cheered as the Lions downed the Trojans with a score of 26 to 13. While the alumni rediscovered old friends and recalled amusing experiences at a dinner held in their honor at Acacia Country Club, LT students danced at "Only Yesterday," putting the finishing touches on a memorable weekend.



High with the spirit of victory, LT students pour through the gates to join the foot parade to the Corral.

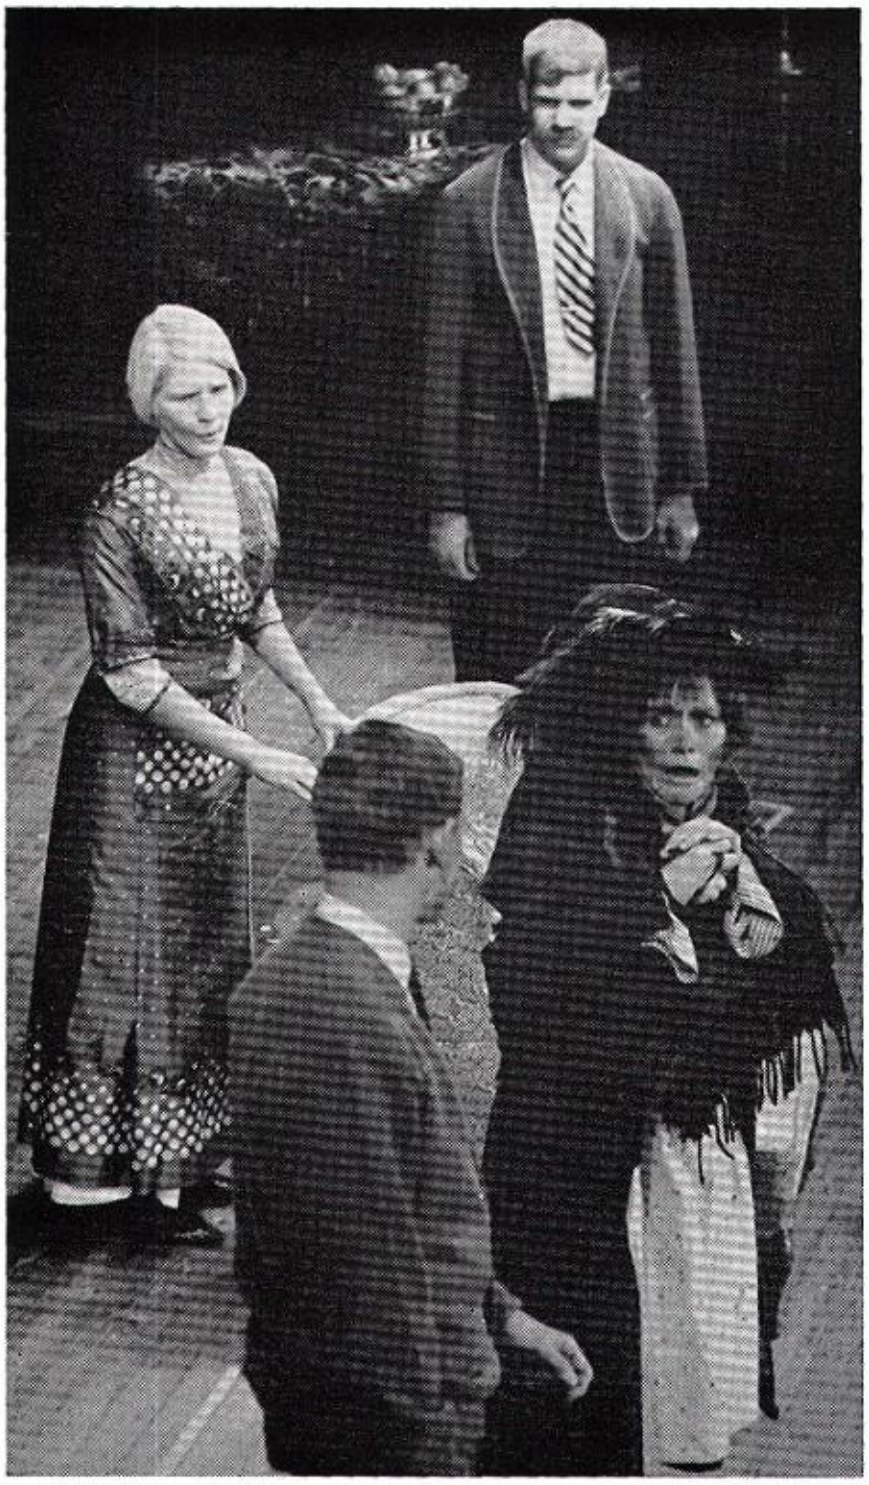
"Macbeth," "Pygamalion



Emily Wade's shabby dress and crude speech are a source of disgust yet inspiration for Harry Simmon as he accepts Walt Seabold's challenge to make her a lady.

Produced under the direction of Mr. Stacey and with the co-operation of Theatre Board, the Fall Play, "Pygmalion," centered upon Professor Higgin's attempt to transform a destitute flower girl into a refined English lady. Countless hours of practice in diction followed daily lessons in elocution until the day finally arrived when Eliza could pronounce "The rain in Spain stays mainly in the plain."

A few barriers had to be hurdled before this production attained a professional quality. Each member of the cast had to acquire a credible English accent. Emily Wade, playing Eliza Doolittle, perfected even the difficult Cockney accent, which was essential for the proper characterization. Rented period costumes — parasols, floor-length dresses, and gigantic hats — added much color and interest and helped the production achieve an air of authenticity. The scenery, constructed by Mr. Thompson's stagecraft classes, was also effective, for it reflected the decor and atmosphere of the early 1900's.

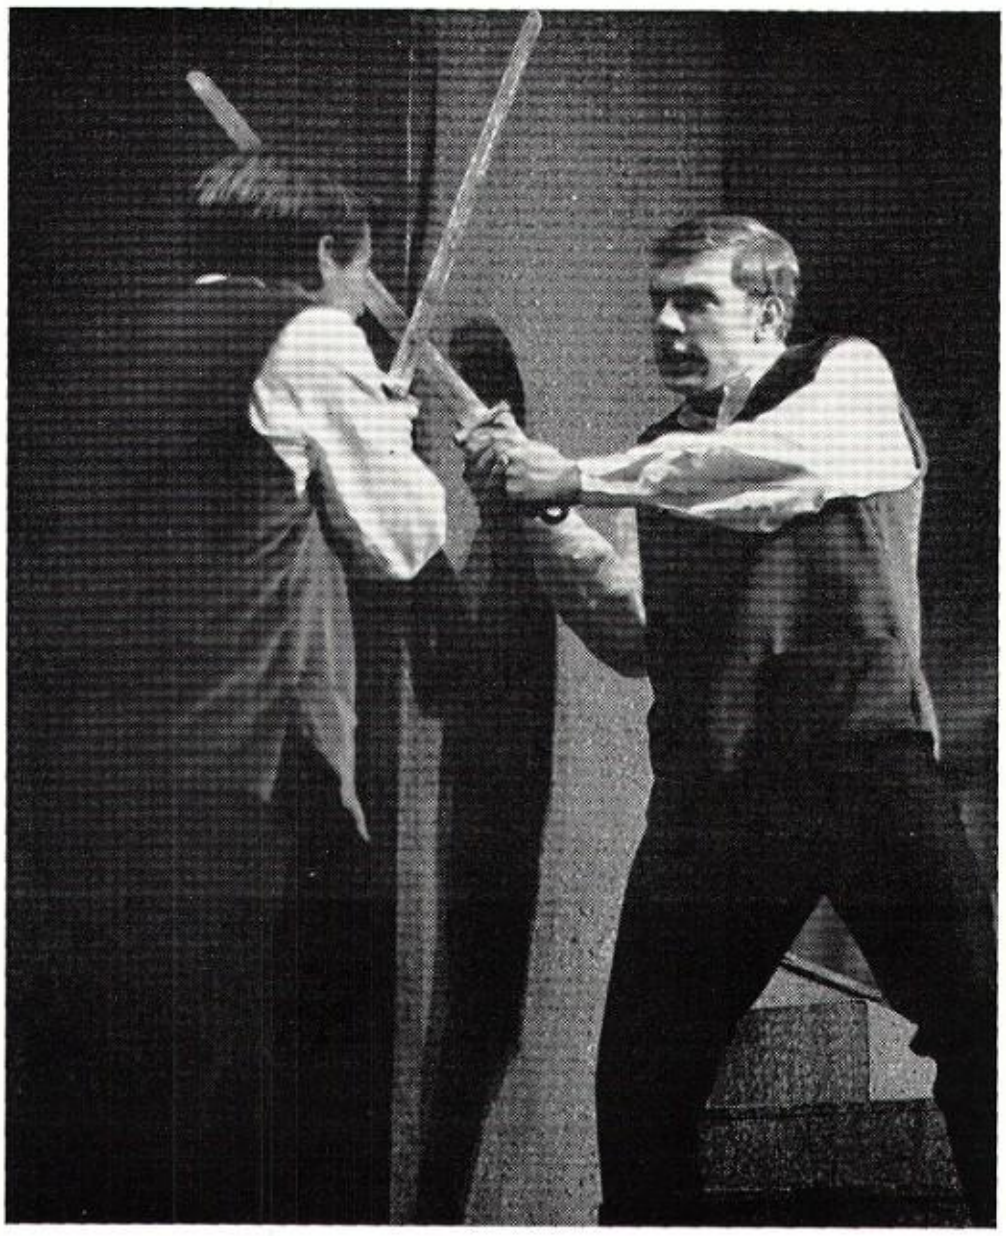
"Double double, toil and trouble" chant witches Michele Vacca, Janice Lokay and Sandy Stoddart as they brew up a cauldron of evil for Macbeth.

The odious crimes of Harry Simmon, Macbeth, are avenged by Jeff Cross, Macduff, in this stairway battle.



Innovations in high school theater were introducted to LT in the Winter Play, "Macbeth." A type of "thrust" stage, extending into the viewers' seats was adapted to LT's auditorium. An assortment of platforms and stairways completed the simple stage set used throughout the performance. This arrangement, which was novel to LT students, recreated the accord between the audience and the players which had been customary for the Elizabethans. Color, in costumes and lighting, played an important part in advancing the plot and theme of "Macbeth". Though costumes were similarly styled, their individual colors were characteristic of the different families. The skillful lighting served to set moods with its many colors reflecting patterns off the muted scenery. To indicate change of scene, students offstage played fanfares on trumpets and rolls on drums and a timpani. As a whole, the ambitious, mature production challenged the imagination of the viewers and conveyed to them the lasting significance of Shakespeare's "Macbeth."

Spring, South Campus plays give participants

The 1965 Spring Play was the first high school production of "J.B." MacLeish, in his poetic interpretation of the Book of Job, presents the experiment of two old actors, Mr. Zuss and Nickles, who play the parts of God and of the devil in a deserted circus tent. After subjecting J.B. to every possible hardship, they impatiently await him to accept or curse God's will. The utterly dejected J.B. asks for forgiveness and demands to know what his guilt is. Eventually both Mr. Zuss and Wickles lose J.B., for the only faith he retains is his faith in human love.

Co-eds' interest in the male situation frequently displaces studies in the South Campus play, "Take Her, She's Mine."

Life on the college campus was the theme of the South Campus Play, "Take Her, She's Mine," directed by Mrs. Bair.

The Michaelsons, the harried parents of two teen-age daughters, send the older of the two sisters, Molly, to a Boston women's college. Her father, concerned over the predicaments which she describes in her letters, determines to visit Molly for a weekend. Finding her well, but a changed person, he reluctantly returns to California. When summer vacation arrives, Molly is back home with ambitions to quit college and become a court stenographer; however, an old beau from Yale, Alex Loomis, convinces her to return to school and marry him. No sooner are Molly's college problems resolved than her father faces more, since his younger daughter Liz is preparing to leave for college.

Diversified talent

Spotlights outline Dan Smith's drums as he solos to bring the Obirin Show to a booming climax.

March eighteenth took all those who attended the 1965 Obirin Talent Show on "a stroll among the stars . . . in the lovely Orchid Room atop the beautiful Hotel Manhattan." The turn-of-the-century theme underlying an original "radio" script was brought out by the cast and the master of ceremonies, Ted Pacocha, and provided a "then and now" contrast in popular entertainment. The student acts ranged from a combo, vocal and piano solos, and the conventional chorus line to a modern dance routine, folk singing groups, and a brassy jazz band. The after-school event featured Mrs. Ester Poole, who had helped to organize the first talent show when she was an LT senior a few years ago.

The Obirin Committe, headed by Miss Wallace and the Foreign Relations Committee chairman, Kaye Oakwood, had been making plans far ahead of the tryouts in February. The proceeds from the sale of over eight hundred tickets went to support Obirin-Gakuen, LT's sister school in Japan.

presented in successful Operetta, Obirin Show

Ray Montgomery is torn between the conflicting futures represented by Linda Martin and Val Hughes.

"At'sa me!" agrees Tony Esposito at the close of the Operetta to his title, the "Most Happy Fella." However, he was not always happy in his marriage to Rosabella, his mail order bride. From the first time they met, his hopes for their marriage were impeded by unforseen difficulties. Marie, Tony's dominating sister, tried to discourage the wedding; but, when Tony's truck turned over and he seemed near death, he was determined that the ceremony would take place immediately, despite Marie's protestations and Rosabella's doubts. The problems of Rosabella's adjustment to her sudden marriage with a man much older than herself were finally resolved in a happy, storybook ending.

Complementing the traditional double-cast leads and the choir and orchestra, the advanced dance group provided the spirited dance numbers that the play demanded. "The Most Happy Fella" was a true operetta in the sense that it contained a great deal of the important material in musical dialogue.

In addition to their many concert performances, the North and South Campus Bands, under the direction of conductors Mr. Hilgendorf and Mr. Barber, undertook three major extra-curricular projects. The first of these was their Homecoming float, "Power Under Our Wings." The second was entering the State Music Contest for Illinois bands. The third activity, a fund drive for over six thousand dollars for the purchase of new uniforms, involved the active participation of all band members in three major campaigns: the kickoff ticket sale for the Spring Band Concert in March; the Band Day, including a march through both La Grange and Western Springs, followed by a car wash and bake sale; and a Talent Show sponsored by the Band. These activities distinguished this as a particularly successful year for the LT bands.

From unorganized rehearsals, scribbled musical corrections, and repeated practice emerge the annual Orchestra concerts. Class work, which had previously been hindered by the separation of campuses, was improved by a new bus service which carried South Campus players and instruments to North for first period every day. Individual students were offered more chances for improvement this year through challenges for seating positions and competition in district and state solo and ensemble contests. Quickly adjusting to the new director, Mr. Barber, the Orchestra performed at the traditional fall Pops Concert with vocal soloists who were chosen by Orchestra members. In the Spring Concert, the Orchestra combined the special talents of its members with the Band and the choral groups to climax a successful year of instrumental advancement. Ending their year unmusically, members enjoyed a picnic, financed by fines for forgotten music and instruments.

The vocal branch of the music department, the Choruses, presented numerous programs this year in combined and solo performances. The Freshman Girls' and Boys' Glee Clubs appeared at such events as the Freshman Mother-Daughter Tea and the Freshman Open House. The members of Sophomore Mixed Chorus, chosen by audition, divided into several small ensembles which entertained at assemblies and non-school activities. As a group, Sophomore Mixed Chorus joined the orchestra at the Sophomore Open House. North Campus vocalists contributed their talents to the Choir, Treble Choir, and Festival Chorus. The all-girl Treble Choir sang at the Junior Open House, and Choir entertained at the Senior Open House. The two groups combined to present the annual Christmas Vespers. Choir's most important production was the operetta, "Most Happy Fella", which demanded exhausting rehearsals of every Choir member for several weeks before the show. All the choral groups joined to entertain at the Christmas concert with the orchestra, and for the Spring Concert with both the orchestra and the band.

To most students the Corral is a place to relax after a hard week. Some dance, some attempt conversation above the din of music and voices, and others find pleasure in merely observing. To the average Corral member it is not apparent just how much organization is needed to keep the Corral running. With the assistance of adult sponsor Mr. Kraus, the officers and the representative board planned the monthly dances, Four Star Nite, and several Big Nites which presented live entertainment. The slogan, "Come to the Olympics and you might get your picture into 'Look'," attracted an unusually large number of people to compete in the Summer Olympics. The national magazine devoted several pages to action-filled pictures of the olympic games. Since the Corral is a student-run, non-profit-making organization which must pay back money each year to those who originally contributed to its establishment, the Corral Show has been devised as a way of making money. The 1965 Corral Show, "It's Snow Mirror'cle", was a financial success as well as an enjoyable evening of entertainment.

In our three years as underclassmen, we develop lasting allegiances, a feeling of membership. Each passing year brings a new class identity accompanied by slightly altered standards and attitudes. Our freshman year brings adjustments and anxieties. We make new friends. As sophomores, we know the rising feeling of togetherness as we become more familiar with classmates and teachers. School becomes much more than just attending classes. Our thoughts and activities as juniors are increasingly turned toward the future. Our directions become ever more diversified in our quest for identification, individuality. These years of striving lead us to realize that together we are LT.

Positions of responsibility in South Campus

The Freshman Class began high school life in a whirl of excitement, hard work, and fun. The first week of school proved to be hectic but satisfying as they adjusted to new teachers, schedules, and homework. At the end of the week, large numbers of the class turned out for the South Campus Mixer, the first social event of the year.

Taking a cue from Homecoming's political theme, class members produced their prize-winning float, "Don't Split Your Ticket-Vote LT." November brought the class party, "Let's Make Plymouth Rock," the first all-freshman social event. Under the direction of the class board, a freshman assembly was held to acquaint the class with its officers, athletes, cheerleaders, and choruses.

Although the freshmen lacked superiority in experience, they made up for this deficiency by their enthusiastic attendance at numerous school functions. By June they had made lasting friendships and had learned the importance of class and school spirit which would be invaluable in their role as leaders of South Campus.

Sophomores leave behind apprehension of first

Under the leadership of class president Emery Edwards and the counseling of class sponsors Miss Lemme and Mr. Lund, the Sophomore Class engaged in a year of service activities. Members of the class acted as guides to introduce the freshmen to South Campus at the beginning of the year. In the holiday spirit, the sophomores donated a Christmas tree to the Masonic Children's Home in La Grange. The tree was then decorated with ornaments made by volunteers from the class and by children from the home. Acting on its commitment of last spring, the class gave financial uspport to a needy teen-ager, Beatrice Toraz Lopaz of Colombia.

Besides these service projects, sophomores were involved in regular class activities. October found class members constructing their Homecoming float, "The Spirit of '67." The class board planned the January assembly which honored sophomore athletes, student government members, aides, and honor roll students. Next, the Ides of March ushered in the annual class party. At the end of the year, sophomores looked forward to a new campus, new courses, and new class standing.

Taking part in N. Campus student government

Members of the Junior Class soon overcame their bewilderment in arriving at North Campus and sought to warrant their coveted upperclass standing. With the help of class president Steve Garbe and sponsors Mrs. Siewerth and Mr. Neunecker, the class members soon became an indispensable and influential component of North Campus life. In the fall, the juniors undertook their first service project, the publication of a descriptive football brochure. Soon afterward, they planned and, after a great deal of hard work, completed their Homecoming float, "Battle of the Bulge." A class constitution was drafted to unite the class board and all members of the class into an active, effective body. This year's junior class, as others before them, experienced the thrill of wearing their new class rings, another sign of their rising status. At Christmas time, class members collected four truckloads of toys to be used as Christmas gifts for children in Chicago orphanages. After completing these two successful service projects, the Class of '66 engaged in a final spring project. The class party in March climaxed the year's activities for the juniors, who now anticipate their final year at LT.

A great potential for unity accompanied the large numbers of the Class of '65 as we entered LT. Separately concerned at first, we soon found that our diverse interests were related, and we began to take interest in each other. Early group activities such as the construction of "Treasure Island," our Homecoming float, and the planning of our class party, "Autumn Leaves," brought us together as freshmen.

Success in competition highlighted our sophomore year: both frosh-soph football and basketball teams were unbeaten conference champions, while our sophomore float, "Noil's Poils," took a first in the Homecoming parade. Outlets for newly-discovered talents were offered in language and science contests and in "The Mouse That Roared," the South Campus play. Our class party, "Emerald City," and the appearance of LXV buttons furthered class unity.

The increased responsibility of North Campus life had a maturing effect on us. As we became involved in a wider range of interests, we each contributed more to class activities. Class members volunteered to put together our float entry, "The Shot Heard Round the World." Our sense of class unity, renewed during Homecoming, was heightened by our class rings and by the colorful buttons which admitted us to "Deep Purple," the junior class party. The serious side of our class' character came to light in Project '65, a sincere, direct effort to become acquainted with elderly persons.

In our final year at LT, we recognized ourselves most completely as a class. Our sweatshirts and beanies were outward signs of the full unity that we felt as seniors. Once again the Class of '65 was victorious in the Homecoming parade with our float, "Hoover-ize 'Em." We next took on two Christmas projects, the food drive and the card sale, which broke all previous records. The Senior Week activities in March, including the free breakfast for seniors, Hello Day, the faculty-senior basketball game, dress-up day, and the final class party, "Circus Train," anticipated our concluding high school events. We experienced a last feeling of togetherness during the solemn graduation ceremonies, the festive Prom, and the lively train ride, "Cannonball '65." Our planned class activities, set among countless personal experiences, shaped our four years together.

Representing approximately fifteen per cent of their class, the members of National Honor Society were elected by a faculty committee on the basis of their contributions to the school, academic achievements, and personality traits. Each member of the upper third of his class submitted a list of his activities in the spring of his junior year to be considered by this committee. At that time, five per cent of the class were elected to membership. This process was repeated in the second semester of the senior year, when another ten per cent were chosen.

Criteria for the selection of finalists and scholars in the National Merit Scholarship competition included students' scores on the corporation's examination, the student's high school record, and an original essay describing the student's interests and plans. Of LT's twenty-one National Merit finalists, four were chosen as scholars this year. Our school was also honored by NBC's decision to feature LT in its June telecast depicting the inner workings of the National Merit Scholarship competition.

Her smile revealing the happiness she feels, senior Chris Stokes signs the National Honor Society register.
